Rare cat is month old

Isn't Beauregard cute?

Beauregard, the month-old Geoffrey cat, celebrated his coming-out Thursday at the Lincoln Children's Zoo.

Geoffreys, endangered South American cats, are high-strung, nocturnal hunters and tree dwellers, said Children's Zoo Director Alan Bietz. Born June 29, Beau can easily hide behind a coffee mug when he's sitting; full grown, he will weigh less than five pounds, smaller than a housecat.

Only one month old, Beauregard seems well on his way to making his mark in animal history. His parents are thought to be the only solid black pair of Geoffrey cats in any zoo, but the kitten has some gray markings, the first Geoffrey of that coloration "we've seen and know of," Bietz said.

A report on Beau's coloration and his four daily feedings will be submitted to the International Zoo Yearbook in London, Bietz said. The kitten's every meal has been tape recorded, a step in studying the rare cats, he said.

Abortion cutoff delayed

New York (AP) — A federal judge in Brooklyn issued a temporary order Thursday that allows continued use of federal Medicaid funds for elective abortions at least until next Wednesday.

Last October the same judge, District Judge John F. Dooling Jr., thwarted an attempt by Congress to cut off such payments. Thursday's ruling came after the U.S. Supreme Court ordered him to reconsider.

Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. has said he is ready to enforce the congressional effort — known as the Hyde Amendment — and to cut off the funds.

But the ruling has the effect of leaving the federal funds available to states that want them for at least one more week.

On Wednesday, Dooling will hear arguments on an application from those who want the payments continued. They are seeking a preliminary injunction barring enforcement of the Hyde Amendment.

Dooling said the case was still "substantial" and the issues "grave."

He said he signed the temporary restraining order Thursday because he feared an immediate halt of the payments "could well endanger the lives of the young poor, who are most likely to take unwise actions and seek illegal abortions."

Nancy Stella, a spokeswoman for the plaintiff American Civil Liberties Union, said the group regarded Dooling's ruling "as a very important development in its continuing effort to insure that the right of reproductive choice can be exercised by rich and poor women alike."

Last year, Congress attached the Hyde Amendment to an appropriations bill, barring use of Medicaid funds for abortions except when the procedure was required to save the mother's life.

Dooling soon issued an order barring the Department of Health, Education and Welfare from enforcing it. He cited the Supreme Court's landmark 1973 abortion ruling and said the Hyde Amendment would effectively deny poor women their right to an abortion.

But on June 20, the Supreme Court ruled that states have no legal obligation to provide indigent women with assistance for abortions that are not medically necessary, and on June 29 it vacated Dooling's order and sent the case back to him.

On Thursday, Dooling said refusal to grant the temporary restraining order "would wreak fiscal harm and havoc — and not to sign it would create needless waste and damage.

"The question is, whether we are still dealing with a substantial case. And we still are," the judge said. "We have grave issues, and they are so grave to cause human travail and suffering that may be needless until we can decide the issues."

Although the case that prompted the ruling began in New York State, Dooling's actions have kept Califano from enforcing the Hyde Amendment anywhere.

The Hyde Amendment is in effect only for this year because it is attached to the appropriations bill.

Nearly all abortions financed by HEW are performed under the Medicaid program. About 300,000 of the 1.1 million abortions performed each year in the United States are paid for by HEW — a cost estimated at more than $50 million.

Western officials lead water attack

By Bob Schrepf
Star Staff Writer

Denver — Jimmy Carter's water policy review has bombed in the West.

Political leaders and resource management officials at a public hearing Thursday attacked with varying shades of vehemence the timing of the Carter administration's study leading to a new federal water policy and the policy options contained therein.

Two Western Democratic governors led the attack at the politically-charged hearing. Witnesses were applauded on several occasions by upwards of 150 spectators as they warmed to the subject.

The hearing was held at the direction of the federal Water Resources Council and moderated by the chairman of the Missouri River Basin Commission.

The universal complaint was the lack of time for the public and water users to prepare input to the review. Only a few less complaints were heard about the options which might be developed in the federal policy on water. The options are viewed by many water users as unrealistic or damaging to their interests.

President Carter has called for development of a new federal water policy, which he will announce Nov. 1 to fit in with the next budget cycle. Policy option papers were published July 15 and the public was given less than two weeks to prepare responses.

Thursday the time frame and the policy options were described as hastily designed, ill-conceived, grossly inadequate, irrational, contrary to the public interest, an Alice in Wonderland concoction and a dog and pony show.

And that was the good news.

Democratic Gov. Dick Lamm of Colorado, a state in which three federal water projects recently were stripped of funds, asked the review panel to lengthen the policy development time frame. Prior requests for such delay he said, were not given "even the courtesy of reply," from the Carter administration. "I find this insulting, insincere and unacceptable," Lamm said. "It is simply improper to give public participation the short shrift it appears to be receiving."

Wyoming Gov. Ed Herschler, also a Democrat, mounted a gravel-voiced assault against the option papers and review procedures and to a storm of applause concluded: "It would appear that the president has decided to formulate a national water policy, and has selected a group of unnamed and faceless individuals who have little or no knowledge of the use of water in the West. Every governor in the Rocky Mountain area is supposed to be a member of the same political family as the president, and yet he chooses to ignore us in a manner that could, without sound advice, result in the complete strangulation of the Western states."

"If there is one thing Democrats and Republicans in the West agree upon, it's water," a water law judge from Colorado told the Star during a hearing recess. "Carter will make certain the West is a Republican stronghold," another water official said.

The majority of witnesses — including resource district representatives, irrigators, water project development advocates and elected officials mindful of the power of those constituencies — expressed a number of fears. Those fears included: a diminishing of state authority in water management, changes in allocation practices whereby, for example, water for agriculture would be converted to energy development, an increase in the price of water to encourage conservation and the condemnation or purchase of water rights.

Certain options prepared by Carter administration task forces could yield such results.

Witnesses were most sensitive about the effect of proposed policy changes on agriculture. The drought, which has persisted in the mountain and Northern Plains States for three- to five-years, was repeatedly mentioned as a reason not to subject irrigators to further hardship by making water more expensive or difficult to obtain.

It wasn't all brickbats for the administration. Several witnesses spoke kind words about options relating to conservation, nonstructural water management alternatives, greater cost-sharing in projects by water users and new water planning arrangements.

But even those witnesses complained about the lack of adequate notice of the hearing. "How can the average citizen, the frustrated citizen, participate?" asked Arlene Wilhelm, a North Dakota State Water Commissioner. "I am afraid the hearings will consist of testimony from representatives of the water fraternity." She said she was "in support of most of what I read."

Similar support was voiced by the representative of Missouri, Gov. James Teasdale.

But in the main, testimony was hostile as it related to most options which would change the status quo in water resource management, especially any which call for a stronger federal hand.

Sen. Fred Anderson, president of the Colorado State Senate, called such policy proposals "the first step toward nationalization of private property rights and I expect that only from some revolutionary dictatorship."

"This whole effort is a charade designed to camouflage the truth that the decisions have already been made," said Fred G. Simonton, representing an association of electric power consumers. "Some of us," he said, "may have voted for an imaginary candidate last November."

Television producers test Lincoln reaction to show

By Harry Jackson
Star Staff Writer

An experimental educational television project to help frustrated parents is underway in Lincoln and opinions of local participants may govern how the program will be structured for national viewing.

The Parent Educational Television Project gives alternatives for child-rearing problems for persons in all types of living conditions.

For instance, one experimental program dealt with the single parent, while another dealt with a black family which had a strict father and a permissive mother.

A major 20-part series is to air nationally on the Public Broadcasting Service when the experimental portion is finished.

"It's designed to make people feel good about their roles as parents," said Ms. Barbara Yanowski who's spearheading the project. "It's a very nonthreatening way to see other people bring up kids and see your mistakes and successes reflected in them."

The experiment includes a six-city, coast-to-coast jaunt which includes Lincoln.

While experimentors are in a city, they show three pilot television programs on the local educational channel to a pre-selected audience that's either at home or in the television studio.

The at-home participants fill out questionnaires and mail them to a Washington, D.C., headquarters, while those in the studio fill theirs out on the spot and give verbal feedback.

The programs aired Monday through Wednesday here and featured the possible program structures such as drama, acting out a problem and solving it, and documentary, the clinical handling of similar problems.

About 190 persons in the Lincoln area — 58 in the studio and the rest at home — viewed the program.

"We found parents liked the drama but they wanted more documentary," Ms. Yanowski said. They want specific information, techniques and suggestions.

"They don't want direction," she continued. "They want as many alternatives as possible that don't have to be from the same philosophy."

Ms. Yanowski's project has been underway for about two months, with the local polling and interviewing preparations done by NETV director-producer Linda Elliot. Also, nine local organizations and agencies helped find members for the sample audience.

How is Chinese city one year after quake?

Hong Kong (UPI) — One year after the world's worst earthquake in 400 years, the city of Tangshan has been variously described as "lively and vigorous" and "like one vast junk pile."

It was 3:42 a.m. in Tangshan last July 28 when three "dazzling lights shot up like thunderbolts" and within seconds transformed a bustling city of one million into a wasteland of rubble, killing two-thirds of the population.

On the anniversary of that disastrous earthquake, the correspondents of China's official New China News Agency described Tangshan as "lively and vigorous . . . ablaze with lights and filled with people."

But the picture painted by the NCNA correspondents was far brighter than those of foreigners who passed through the devastated city recently.

One Peking resident who recently traveled through the city by train — no foreigners have yet been permitted to visit — said this week "the scene still is one of utter destruction."

"Huge piles of rubble slope right down into the streets," he said. "People still are literally living in the rubble . . . in makeshift shelters made from the rubble. There are tens of thousands of people in these shelters."

But the NCNA correspondents saw a different city.

"Tangshan is as lively and vigorous as any other Chinese city, although a year ago today it was hit by the world's worst earthquake in recent history," NCNA said.

No casualty figures have ever been announced, but a report attributed to Communist Party officials indicated at least 655,237 people died and more than 779,000 were injured. History's most deadly previous quake was in China's Shensi province in 1556, when more than 800,000 died.

But one traveler through the district recently observed:

"Thirty minutes or more before the train reaches Tangshan, you see hundreds, perhaps thousands of those conical graves in the fields alongside the rail track."

Judge faces recall election

Madison, Wis. (UPI) — Judge Archie E. Simonson — the judge who touched off a storm by suggesting rape is a normal reaction in a permissive society — Thursday became the first Wisconsin official to face recall.

The Dane County clerk's office said 35,319 of the 36,343 signatures on recall petitions filed Monday were valid. A total of 21,049 signatures were required. An election was set for Sept. 7, with Aug. 10 the deadline for circulation of nomination papers.

Simonson's name will be on the ballot unless he resigns within 10 days. He has refused to do so since he made the remark despite demands from the city council, county board and school board.

Few want to live in New York

(c) New York Times

New York — A national poll conducted after the blackout in New York City on July 13-14 indicates that 6% of Americans now think New York is a good place to live and 33% think it is a good place to visit.

The poll, done by the New York Times and CBS News, also indicates that a majority of Americans — 53% — think a wave of looting would be less likely to accompany a vast power failure if it occurred in their communities.

Johnstown death toll hits 67

Johnstown, Pa. (UPI) — Two bodies were pulled Thursday from a rubble pile in front of the Conemaugh Dam, 35 miles from Johnstown, raising the death toll to at least 67 in last week's floods.

Workers dumping rubble into a landfill earlier in the day found a body in the debris. Bulldozers apparently scooped up the unidentified body and loaded it into a truck before it was discovered.

Agency created for paperwork

New York (AP) — A bill drafted to reduce the load of 105 tons of city records was signed into law Thursday by Mayor Abraham D. Beame.

The new law established a new agency, the Department of Records and Information, which is empowered to convert many of the records into waste paper and consolidate what survives under one roof.

City Council President Paul O'Dwyer said the city maintains enough records to fill 800,000 file cabinets, enough paper "to stretch from New York City to Tampa, Fla." or "build a solid wall around the five boroughs."

O'Dwyer said that by reducing rented space to store the records and by selling tons of worthless paperwork, the city would save $2.5 million in the first year and substantially more in succeeding years.

Talks scheduled on banning all nuclear tests

Washington (AP) — President Carter announced Thursday that the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union will begin preliminary talks on Oct. 3 aimed at completely banning all of their nuclear testing.

Carter also told a nationally broadcast news conference Thursday that he believes Israel's move to legalize settlements on former Arab lands in the West Bank area has set up "obstacles to peace." But he called them "obstacles which I think we can overcome."

Carter said he hoped the nuclear talks, to be held in Geneva, could lead to other nations also agreeing to ban all nuclear testing.

"It is my hope," he said, "that sufficient basis for agreement can be reached that all other nations of the world will join us in the ultimate prohibition against testing of nuclear devices."

More than 100 countries, including the U.S., Soviet Union and Britain, already have agreed not to explode any nuclear device above ground, underwater or in outer space. The only nation currently exploding nuclear devices in the atmosphere is the People's Republic of China.

Treaties also have been reached between the U.S. and the Soviet Union limiting the explosive power of underground atomic tests and banning underground tests except for peaceful purposes. However, the Senate has not yet ratified these agreements and they are not officially in effect.

There is no ban or pending ban on underground testing for peaceful purposes. Both the U.S. and USSR have exploded numerous underground bombs in recent years.

Questions about Middle East peace prospects dominated the 35-minute news conference. However, Carter had this to say on other topics:

— "Accurate criticisms" of his domestic policies by blacks and others are fine. However, to the extent that director Vernon Jordan of the National Urban League alleged in a weekend blast "that neither I nor my administration nor the Congress was concerned about the poor, those statements were erroneous" and could rob the poor of hope for "a better life."

— The nation's projected annual trade deficit of $25 billion, a cause for concern in some quarters, is due wholly to oil imports and, in Carter's view, underscores the need for a national energy conservation program.

— Having interviewed six candidates to succeed Clarence Kelley as director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the President said he feels no pressure to act quickly and "we reserve the right to interview more in the future if we like."

— Carter favors new congressional charters to spell out the responsibilities of the FBI and the Central Intelligence Agency.

— During his first six months in office, he has "learned how to work much more harmoniously with the Congress" and has gained respect for the diligence and expertise of its members.

— Carter acknowledged making "minor mistakes" during the half-year and drew laughter by adding, "To be perfectly frank, I don't personally care to point them out."

— Despite planned fresh arms shipments to the Middle East, Carter remains committed to restraining arms sales and expects them to drop in the coming year. He sugested that many impending shipments reflect decisions made by former President Gerald R. Ford's administration.

The first question put to Carter was whether he believed Middle East peace prospects were hurt by Israel's decision to legalize three settlements on occupied Arab lands on the west bank of the Jordan River.

"Yes," he said. "I think that any move toward making permanent the settlements in the occupied territories, or the establishment of new settlements, obviously increases the difficulty in ultimate peace."

Carter said Israeli Prime Minister Menaham Begin, during a visit here last week, gave no advance hint of the action. Carter said he informed Begin of "my strong hope that nothing would be done by the Israeli government in establishing new settlements that might exarcebate an already difficult position."

The Israeli parliament voted down Wednesday a ban on new settlements and Carter said Begin gave him no commitments on the subject.

The President, continuing to express optimism that a Geneva conference on the Middle East can be convened this year, said:

"I think the major stumbling block at this point is the participation in the negotiations by the Palestinian representatives. Our position has been that they ought to be represented..."

Begin has refused to negotiate with representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization, regarded by the Arabs as the legitimate representative of Palestinians. However, Begin has indicated he would not check the credentials of those who made no claim to speak for the PLO.

Carter and family will aid campaign

Washington (UPI) — President Carter Thursday pledged to be an active campaigner in the Democratic Party's $2 million drive to maintain its large majorities in the House and Senate in the 1978 off-year elections.

Carter, Vice President Walter Mondale and Democratic National Chairman Kenneth Curtis launched the program after a two hour White House meeting of 35 top Democrats.

"We're going to have to work hard," Carter said. "I'm eager to participate. I'm convinced the country will be better off if we have a strong Democratic showing next year."

The $2 million program outlined at the meeting — described as the Democrats' most ambitious off-year effort ever — was aimed at reversing the historical pattern of the party in power losing seats in the midterm election.

One-third of the Senate and all 435 House seats are on the ballot next year.

Curtis said Carter had agreed to no specific number of days on the stump, but pledged the effort would include all the members of the first family.

"Unless there's some crisis in the country, he's going to be quite generous with his time," Curtis said. He added that Carter has agreed to campaign for the Democratic gubernatorial candidates in Virginia and New Jersey this fall.

His first appearance will be at a party fund raising dinner in Los Angeles Oct. 22, Curtis announced.

"I think we have a good opportunity," Carter told the Democratic meeting. "I'm convinced the country will be better off if we have a strong Democratic showing next year."

House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill said the Democratic strategists agreed there should be "closer cooperation" between the House and Senate campaign committees and the Democratic National Committee "but not to the point of jeopardizing" the independence of the congressional candidates.

The $2 million program included direct contributions of more than $1 million by the Democratic National Committee to candidates. The committee has also drawn up a $50,000 budget to pay for Carter's campaigning.

Iran arms request delayed

Washington (UPI) — President Carter agreed Thursday to withdraw temporarily his request for the sale of $1.2 billion worth of sophisticated radar control planes to Iran.

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd announced Carter's "reasonable and statesmanlike" decision — designed to give Congress more time to debate the controversial sale — shortly after a House committee went on record as opposing it.

Byrd said Carter would resubmit the sale request in September, affording Congress another 30 days beyond that point to veto it.

Members of Congress, led by Byrd, had been trying to persuade Carter to defer the sale of seven so-called AWACS — for Airborne Warning and Command System — planes to Iran so that Congress, which begins its summer recess Friday, could review it thoroughly and have an opportunity to vote it down.

Without Carter's deferral, the sale would have automatically taken effect while Congress was in recess.

Byrd interrupted a Senate filibuster on another issue to announce Carter's decision.

"President Carter," he said, "has taken a reasonable and statesmanlike action in withdrawing, temporarily, the notice of the proposed sale of the airborne warning and command systems to Iran."

He said Carter would resubmit the sale request in September.

Shortly before Byrd's announcement, the House International Relations Committee voted 19 to 17 to recommend disapproval of the proposed sale.

Fire threatens airplane on takeoff; none injured

Boston (AP) — A DC10 jetliner headed for Los Angeles with 192 passengers aborted take off today when an explosion and fire erupted in its tail engine as it gathered speed on the runway at Logan International Airport.

All passengers and a crew of 12 aboard the American Airlines craft escaped without serious injury, an airport spokesman said. But one passenger said one of the airplane's inflatable escape chutes failed to open.

"All of a sudden there was a 'boom' that shook the whole plane," said Edward F. Johnson of Worcester, Mass.

The cause of the explosion was not determined.

Johnson, who with his wife and daughter was flying for the first time, said he smelled smoke as the plane came to a halt.

He said the chute near his escape hatch did not open and "we had to cross over four seats to get to an exit with a ramp." He said a stewardess stood guard at the opened hatch to make sure no one fell out.

There were conflicting reports on how orderly the evacuation came off. Johnson said, "Everyone started panicking. It was all chaos." Others reported the escape was more orderly in their sections of the plane.

"He was taking off. I doubt if he had much speed," said the spokesman for Massachusetts Port Authority, operator of the airport.

"A bunch of people thought that was a tire. But I saw smoke pass by my window. The stewardesses were scared and I was too. But they did a good job," said Beth Gibson, 18, a passenger from Fullerton, Calif.

She said the explosion sounded like a "pop."

Chutes burst from the sides of the wide-body jet as it came to a rest on a runway almost at the center of the airport.

Emergency vehicles raced to the plane and a crew smothered the tail of the craft with foam. Some passengers suffered minor injuries while escaping from the plane.

"I ran for the field and then turned around and I thought I was far enough away," said passenger John Yvon, 18, of Long Beach, Calif. He said the evacuation took about two minutes.

The fire, put out by equipment on the ground, did not spread into the cabin.

New Yorkers wait for killer

New York (UPI) — For most New Yorkers, it will be a typical Friday night

But in Queens and the Bronx, they will be waiting

Waiting for the psychopathic killer, "Son of Sam," to strike again

Friday it will be a year since he first struck, killing 18-year-old Donna Lauria as she sat chatting with 19-year-old Jody Valenti in a car outside a Bronx apartment house

In the last year, Sam has struck six more times using the same 44-caliber bulldog revolver — killing five and wounding six He usually strikes on the weekends, late at night, and on quiet streets

His victims are usually young white women with long brown hair Three of his victims have been men with long hair All of his victims have been Catholic

'I am still here, like a spirit roaming the night Thirsty, hungry, seldom stopping to rest anxious to please Sam," the killer said in a letter sent in May to newspaper columnist Jimmy Breslin

And he hinted in his letter that his next strike may come Friday — the anniversary of his first killing

"Tell me, Jim, what will you have for July twenty-ninth?" he wrote Breslin

"You must not forget Donna Lauria and you cannot let the people forget her, either. She was a very sweet girl but Sam's a thirsty lad and he won t let me stop killing until he gets his fill of blood "

Almost 200 detectives and patrolmen — some volunteering their time — are working around the clock in the largest manhunt in recent history

So far, more than 2,000 persons have been interviewed and 166,000 letters were sent to gun clubs around the country in an effort to track all 28 000 44-caliber bulldog revolvers manufactured by the Charter Arms Co

A hypnotist was brought in to help question the victims and a group of psychiatrists is studying the killer hoping to give police new clues to his sex life and his reason for killing

Theories about the identify of the killer have come in from as far away as Japan and all leads are followed up — no matter how improbable

"They give us ideas," said Deputy Inspector Timothy Dowd, the fatherly detective in charge of the 50-officer Son of Sam task force "Believe me, we'll take any and all of 'em

"A guy from New South Wales writes that our perpetrator is Oriental, that he sounds like he's from Singapore because there are certain natural characteristics to Orientals, certain dietary and moral codes Who knows?"

The police are convinced they will capture their killer but what worries Chief of Detectives John Keenan most is Sam's recent silence The gunman left a note in April, then one in May, but there has been no word since

"We'd like to hear from you," Keenan said in a public appeal to the killer "But say it in a letter or telephone call, rather than a bullet '

Fugitive Korean witness sought

Washington (UPI) — President Carter has authorized a top-level diplomatic effort to obtain the return of a fugitive star witness in the Korean bribery investigation Atty Gen Griffin Bell disclosed Thursday

White House spokesmen confirmed Carter had authorized "specific steps and actions ' to get the testimony of South Korean businessman Tongsun Park, who fled from Washington to London last year when federal investigators began questioning him on covert Korean efforts to buy influence in Congress

' We are operating at the highest diplomatic levels' in an effort to obtain Park's return, Bell told a news conference

"They have to go through the state department and the president is assisting me in clearing this up I ve talked to the president himself and he s helped me '

Asked if some of the efforts were aimed at getting South Korean government assistance, Bell said, "that would be a fair assumption "

Defense Secretary Harold Brown recently held several days of talks with South Korea s President Park Chung Hee and other Seoul government officials

There also was speculation Carter may have discussed the question with British Foreign Minister David Owen last Saturday when the two men had a private conference devoted mainly to Rhodesia

Administration spokesmen refused to confirm or deny that possibility

At the White House Deputy Press Secretary Rex Granum declined to disclose in detail Carter s role in the efforts to get Park s testimony, saying, ' I m sure you can appreciate how delicate the matter is

But Granum confirmed that at Bell's request, "the president authorized specific steps and actions towards seeking the testimony of Tongsun Park "

Park a wealthy businessman renowned for throwing lavish high society parties in Washington, is alleged to have been the paymaster of the covert lobbying effort He fled to London late last year when federal investigators began questioning him

Both the justice department and the House Ethics Committee are investigating allegations that Korean agents, led by Park had long tried to buy influence with members of Congress by providing them cash, gifts, women, parties, free trips and other favors

A justice department spokesman acknowledged Wednesday that the government lacks the evidence to extradite Park as a material witness or a suspect

But even so the British could choose to deport Park to the United States and the Korean regime could put pressure on him to return voluntarily Park, however, has denied he is a Korean agent

In another development related to the Korean lobbying investigation, CIA Director Stansfield Turner said Thursday the agency has given the justice department secret information that has "important implications for the probe

He would not elaborate nor would he confirm reports the CIA material might show the bribery efforts were aimed at senators as well as House members

Personalities

Presley hounded

Elvis Presley was mercilessly exploited by capitalists and then tossed onto the scrapheap when he went out of fashion, as the Soviet Union tells it.

The weekly newspaper "Literaturnaya Gazeta" said Presley is now "a wreck" at the age of 42 — a "morally devastated" victim of heartless Western show business.

Beame didn't beam twice

Mayor Abraham Beame of New York was trapped in his office twice Thursday, first when a knob fell from the room's only door and later when an aide inadvertently closed the malfunctioning door again.

An aide said Beame laughed off the first incident but "wasn't too pleased" about the second

'Pornomaniacs' criticized

Mayor Ralph J Perk of Cleveland welcomed delegates Thursday to what he calls his National Conference on the Blight of Obscenity by declaring war on "pornomaniacs . . the addicts of pornomania."

The gaunt, bush-haired Perk told the delegates that pornography "could be an illness, a mania, which ought to be isolated, treated and set aright — before it infests any more of our youth "

Texan swims channel

Tom Hetzel, 41-year-old former New York City policeman, completed his eighth successful swim of the English Channel early Thursday

He covered the 21 miles from Dover's Shakespeare Beach to near Cap Gris Nez, France, in 13 hours 59 minutes.

For Hetzel, who now teaches police science at a Corpus Christi, Tex., college, it was one year to the day since he last swam the Channel.

Man lucky to be in one piece

Birmingham Ala (AP) — Frank Gilbert is a lucky man

Authorities said Gilbert, 38, of Riverside, Ala , escaped with only back injuries when dynamite he was setting up at a road construction site was detonated by lightning Wednesday

Gilbert said he had hooked up three sticks of dynamite and went back to check the connections at the detonator box when lightning struck near the wires throwing rocks and dirt over him.

Gilbert said he was thankful the lightning didn't strike 15 minutes later By then, he said, he would have had 21 sticks of the explosive ready to use on the U S 280 construction site near here

Variety spices McNeil's job

By Charles E. Wieser
United Press International

The inquiries and complaints directed to state ombudsman Murrell B. McNeil cover a broad range reflecting just about all facets of governmental operations from the local to the state levels.

"No matter what anyone says, there are people lost in the shuffle" when they try to cope with governmental rules, regulations and directives, McNeil said, and frequently these persons, wanting to know if their rights are being violated, turn to his office for help.

A list of recent typical calls showed people had contacted him for answers to questions dealing with insurance, education, motor vehicles, public institutions, the state personnel department, municipal government, prisons, vocational rehabilitation, roads, health and labor.

Geographically, the number of information seekers reflects the population of the various parts of the state.

"We get them from all over," McNeil said. "In fact, we have slightly more contacts percentagewise from outstate than from Omaha and Lincoln."

The reason, he believes, is that the government in the state's two largest cities is closer to the people and has many local grievance-handling mechanisms.

McNeil, 60, a retired Army lieutenant colonel, is the only ombudsman Nebraska has had. A former state tax commissioner during the administration of Gov. Norbert T. Tiemann, McNeil was installed in his present post in 1971 and was recently appointed by the Legislature to another six-year term.

He said his office fields about 55 written complaints or inquiries monthly and handles another 150 by telephone.

Many persons "simply want to know how to plug into government" but don't know how to go about it, McNeil said.

"In hundreds of cases we can give the answers by phone because we have many closely analogous calls," McNeil said. "We know which agencies can help and also know the laws governing particular situations."

Even though his workload is growing, McNeil said he has a large enough budget and staff.

"There are a lot of corrections that can be made in government if we know about them," he said. "Often, upon checking, we find an agency isn't wrong in what it is doing but the person making the inquiry hasn't had an explanation."

He said persons often ask about matters that have no relationship to government but he will still steer them to the proper parties for answers.

"This office will never say: 'That (question) is not a function of our office. Goodbye,' " McNeil said.

Public awareness of the availability of his office's services has increased but he wishes it were better.

"One of the great values of an ombudsman is that he can explain alternatives to people with problems," McNeil said.

He said he has found when a person writes to his office, the letter is apt to include a complaint but when a person calls, he wants information.

"But if he didn't get the information, he would complain," McNeil said. "After we answer his inquiry, he frequently accepts that as final and definitive."

He said he has noticed that many people have read so much about distrust in government and the things they buy, they want to have the opinion of an ombudsman, whom they consider neutral.

A number of inquiries come from inmates of penal institutions. "They want someone to reaffirm that action taken in their cases is appropriate or they might want to discuss an issue with a neutral party," McNeil said. Penal grievance officers handle many more such inquiries than his office, he said, "but there are some inmates who don't want to tell anyone at the prison of their problems."

Foreign currency climb cuts visitor cents short

(c) New York Times

London — Edward Carpenter, a marine insurance underwriter who lives in Queens, peered through the Buckingham Palace fence this gray Thursday afternoon feeling a bit snug that no matter what happens to the slumping dollar his trip through England and Scotland this summer would not be cut short.

He remembered that four years ago hotels, restaurants and even professional moneychangers would not accept dollars across Europe for several days, and this time he decided to take precautions.

"I bought some travelers checks in pounds as my insurance," Carpenter said as he eyed the gate through which Prince Charles had just driven his open sports car. "If I get to a place where they are not taking dollars, then I've got my pounds."

But another American tourist described the rude jolt he felt this spring as most European currencies rose sharply against the dollar. The pound, held in check by the Bank of England, was allowed to rise about two cents Wednesday.

Charles Hengehold, retired from the Technicolor Corp. in Hollywood, said he lost about $540, or 6% of the cost, including shipping charges, of a Volkswagen van he ordered in early April but which he did not pay for until last Tuesday.

He said ruefully at the busy Haymarket office of American Express he thought of buying his marks earlier "but in the press of things I just didn't get around to it."

Most Americans, however, appear only to have just begun noticing the latest decline in the dollar's spending power and not many seem to be letting it interfere with their vacation plans. Most indicated that they had not bothered to figure out whether higher overall travel costs reflected poor currency exchange rates or simply local inflation.

"I just multiply by five for every dollar," declared Lew Wallich, a university student from Miami visiting France. "I don't worry too much about a few cents more or a few cents less. I'm only here for 10 days and if it gets too expensive, I'll be in Spain sooner than I expected."

When Burt Rosenberg, a New York store manager, was told that prices in Paris boutiques were now 2% higher for him, he shrugged and said, "I figured they were already about 50% too expensive for me anyway."

An American Express official in Frankfurt noted that a large percentage of American tourists come to West Germany not as individuals but as members of charter groups.

Some tour members, he said, may be required to pay a surcharge after their return home to cover the increased cost of their trips in marks. "But others are merely finding that pocket money does not go as far as they had hoped."

Meanwhile, American Express here in Britain changed its method of quoting currency rates earlier this week, an official said Thursday. It now charges a flat 35 cents per transaction instead of reflecting what he said was a larger amount in the rate. This makes it easier for tourists to compare rates, the official said.

In Rome, a quick survey of the Trevi Fountain area found most Americans barely aware that the dollar was down, though not much, against the weakened lira.

Hail breaks Bruning windows

Golfball-size hail pelted the Bruning area Thursday afternoon as thunderstorms developed in south eastern Nebraska due to moist, unstable air.

A few windows were broken by the hailstones at Bruning and there was minor damage to plants, according to a National Weather Service observer at the northern Thayer County community. The storm covered a two by four-mile area, centered over the town, it was reported. Rainfall of 1.35 inches accompanied the storm at Bruning.

The heaviest rainfall was reported at Nebraska City where 2.05 inches was recorded.

Garland, located in northeastern Seward County, received 1.20 inches of moisture within an hour, while Roca, 10 miles south of Lincoln, reported .91 of an inch plus a brief period of pea-size hail.

Hickman's rainfall amounted to .78 of an inch with quarter-inch size hail. At Falls City .72 of an inch fell.

Beall gets Lincoln General job

The Lincoln General Hospital board Thursday night awarded a contract to Beall Construction Co. for a grounds building and parking lot.

Beall submitted a low bid of $67,670 for a building to house the hospital's maintenance equipment and for a 24-stall parking lot to be used by the Independent Center.

At an earlier meeting, the Lincoln Hospital Association board — the fund-raising element of Lincoln General Hospital — voted to sell the house and lot at 2445 St. Mary to the hospital. This property adjoins two lots currently owned by the hospital and the three will be used for the grounds building and the parking lot.

In other business, the association board approved the purchase of two properties — 2440 S. 14th and 2325 S. 16th — for a total expenditure of $55,700.

The association also approved the bylaws of the Lincoln General Hospital Community Development Council. The council was recently developed to provide community services and encourage financial support for the hospital.

Association board members also agreed to establish a trust agreement for the Independent Center. The trust fund would allow interested persons and center alumni to make contributions specifically to the facility.

The fund money would be used for things such as capital improvements. And "hopefully, we'll reach a point when this fund will pay for the care of those who can't afford to pay for it themselves," said Lincoln General Administrator Bob Brungard.

A nose count more accurate than census

Ottosen, Iowa (AP) — Residents of Ottosen say the Bureau of the Census in wrong when it says the town lost population and the postmaster, with little trouble, proved it.

"During my noon hour last Wednesday, I wrote down all the names of all the people and their children and its shows we gained population," said Edna Kampen.

A 1977 estimate released in Kansas City said the community had declined from 93 in the official 1970 census to 67 this year.

"I know my little town. I know all the families. So I didn't have to go door to door. I did it all my memory," Mrs. Kampen said.

Her nose count said the community's population is 124.

She said Eldon Meyer, town clerk, and council member Tom Bennett also prepared lists and also came up with 124.

A Census Bureau official said the estimate was based on birth and death counts and from income tax return addresses.

A compromise, maybe — but pork barrel loses

The celebrated Carter assault on federal pork barrel projects has subsided for the year. The results of this first battle can be judged a draw, with maybe an edge to Congress, maybe not, depending on how you look at it.

The President came roaring out of the chute shortly after his inauguration, placing upwards of 30 federal water projects on an initial review list. Approximately half passed review, measuring up to high standards of feasibility, safety, environmental impact, need and so forth, in the eyes of Carter's review team.

Eighteen projects remained on Carter's hit list and the President at various times during the past few months appeared reluctant to yield an inch more. This newspaper supported Carter's laudable battle against high cost, inefficient, unsafe or environmentally degrading water projects from the outset and hoped Carter wouldn't budge in the showdown with Congress over pork barrel public works appropriations. It appeared to be a most appropriate place at which to break insane federal spending habits.

Carter since has yielded — a pragmatic retreat, it might be called — yet he promises further review of projects both proposed and under construction each year he's in office. It is a promise we think and hope he means to keep.

As for the notorious hit list, Congress this week sent a bill to the White House — the product of negotiations with the administration — which eliminated funding for nine of the water projects which Congress sought originally to keep. Of course, it provided funds for nine of the projects Carter originally sought to cut. Both sides, in raw figures, got half a loaf, which each side can claim is better than none at all. Congress also got concessions on neutron bomb development, while Carter was conceded the elimination of funding for the continued development of the Clinch River breeder reactor.

It was a case of the immovable object, Congress, meeting the irresistible force, Carter, and each side giving a little — which was probably the furthest thing from the minds of both when the battle was first joined, but which, as many seasoned observers might have guessed, was the most likely outcome.

Still, ol' pork barrel got a few staves kicked out, and Congress should now be aware that a new age has dawned on public works funding and water resource development.

Disturbing pattern emerges

During budget sessions this week City Councilman Bob Sikyta suggested a hike in bus fares might be in order to help the Lincoln Transportation System (LTS) overcome a projected $1.2 million deficit this next fiscal year.

No specific fare hike was discussed. Action was withheld on the LTS budget until next week.

According to Sikyta, people are willing to pay higher fares.

That may be, but we have heard no clamor in the community for higher bus fares.

Higher fares might be just what the doctor ordered if the idea is to discourage the development of a popular, efficient public transportation system.

In this critical transportation area, there has to be less emphasis on the concept of "running it like a business" (that is, taking in as much or more as you spend) and more emphasis on providing low-cost, convenient transportation. And if adequate service levels have to be subsidized, so be it.

The name of the game is volume. As volume goes up, the deficit should go down. But volume won't go up if fares are increased and service cut back.

Public transportation has to be seen as a usable alternative in the new energy age. Those who discourage its use reinforce dependence on the private auto and single passenger use of the private auto. Those who discourage the use of public transportation by raising fares and cutting service also make it pretty hard for people who can't afford the luxury of car ownership or for one reason or another can't or don't drive.

LTS bus ridership has shown recent signs of building. June's figures were encouraging, at any rate.

But that advance could be shot down if fares shoot up.

A pattern seems to be emerging among councilmen who want to discourage car pooling and public transportation. It makes no sense at all.

Chicago, good and bad

Mike Royko

Chicago — Chicago's national and worldwide reputation has been changing in recent years.

Because of Sir Georg Solti and the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, it is now thought of as one of the great centers of classical music.

To others, it is the city to visit for the nation's boldest urban architecture.

Thousands of people have come here this summer to see the Tut exhibit and to take advantage of our many other cultural attractions.

Visitors go away talking about the amazing variety and quality of our dining places. Some say the best of our French restaurants equal those anywhere.

Our plazas have blossomed with the creations of such artists as Picasso and Chagall. Our lake swarms with more and more yachts and sleek sailing craft. Our ultra-chic shops and new stores display the newest and most expensive fashions.

Saul Bellow has brought us a Nobel prize in literature and the attention of the nation's literati.

And, of course, our new mayor jogs, plays tennis and has taken a former debutante as his bride.

But at the same time that we become known for our more sophisticated qualities, we do not forget our heritage and the activities that first made the rest of the world sit up and take notice of us.

It is fine to become cosmopolitan, cultured, refined and debonair. But we also have managed to maintain those traditions that gave us a certain flair and style that are all our own.

What I mean is, the stiffs are still plopping down all over the place.

Visit our museums, yes. But don't forget our morgue. Even for Chicago, the proliferation of professionally ventilated bodies is truly amazing.

For all of its shooty nose bragging, its Cosa Nostra, its Godfather movies, I have yet to see New York have a week-and-a-half like we've had lately.

Just consider these events.

First, there was the ever-popular Maeshe Baer, loan shark and former purveyor of La Salle Street's finest corned beef sandwich with pickle, being found in the trunk of his car. The cops said it was meant to be a warning. I don't know what kind of warning. Knowing Maeshe, a kick in the shins would have impressed him just as much.

A few days later, Mark Thanasouras, a former police commander turned crook turned stoolie turned bartender, died of what has now become a natural cause in Chicago. He met a man on the street with a shotgun. The next morning a knowing radio commentator said: "His past caught up with him." You can say that about a guy who died of gout.

Thanasouras barely had cooled when a lady opened an elevator in an office building and found the bodies of four slick businessmen who apparently had been involved in some kind of fast buck scheme.

A detective was asked: "Why do you think they were left on the elevator."

He said: "They were probably too much to carry down the stairs."

The police quickly announced that they were looking for a guy named Sam Annerino because they believed that he knew something about the four dead bodies.

But before the police could find him, somebody else found Annerino first. And he was turned into a dead body, too.

So now the police are looking for two men who wear ski masks and carry shotguns and squeal their tires when they depart. If my memory is correct, the police have been looking for two men who fit that description for the last 10 years and 58 murders.

But by tomorrow the two men in ski masks might be dead bodies, too, and the police will be looking for three men in Halloween masks who carry bazookas.

The carnage has reached the point where a homicide investigator looked into the trunk of a car and let out a horrified scream.

"What is that" he cried, pointing into the car trunk.

"That's the spare tire," his partner said.

"Oh," said the detective. "I forgot."

Hallowed hilltop is threatened

May, 1970 . . . a girl screams over one of four students killed by Guardsmen gunfire . . .

July, 1977 . . . Kent State campus police remove protester from Blanket Hill . . .

By Mike Holmes
Staff Writer

The news came quickly and hit hard that warm spring afternoon.

National Guard troops, a hundred strong but outnumbered and scared, had opened fire on a crowd of students. With frightening suddenness, the long protest against the nation's longest war exploded in tragedy on an Ohio hilltop.

The troops feared for their safety, their commander said. They were surrounded by angry students. They were out of tear gas. They pulled the triggers.

Four students died: William K. Schroeder, 19; Sandra Lee Scheuer, 20; Jeffrey G. Miller, 20; Allison Krause, 19.

The reaction, too, was sudden.

Protests intensified. University of Nebraska students voted to strike. Campus after campus closed. At many schools, buildings were seized by students; more troops were called out; at the University of Maryland, bayonets were fixed. Nationwide, the tensions were unbearable.

But at Kent State, four were dead. And Americans, regardless of feelings about Vietnam and protests and long-haired kids, began to feel twinges of uncertainty.

They wondered when it was reported that William Schroeder had been an Eagle Scout.

Doubts grew when it was said that Sandy Scheuer had just been walking to class when the disorder swirled around her one moment and rifles fired the next.

Doubts turned to tears when told that Allison Krause, who often carried a kitten on campus, had on the day before her death placed a flower in the barrel of a Guardsman's rifle and said: "Flowers are better than bullets."

And today, the hilltop and the memories are about all that's left to mark May 4, 1970.

But Kent State University trustees have fenced off the hilltop. They've decided the empty ground is better used for a gymnasium annex.

There are those, it seems, who can't understand why anyone would want to save a piece of ground.

But would the Gettysburg battlefield be as eloquent a statement on the horrors of brother-against-brother war had it been subdivided and filled with split-level houses?

Would Independence Hall still signify liberty and justice for all had it been torn down to make room for a 20-story bank?

And what, without that Ohio hilltop, would serve as a reminder of the terrifying day when American soldiers were turned against American students?

Well, Kent State officials say, the school cannot afford to redesign the blueprints or seek new bids to move the gymnasium annex to another site.

But it would seem there's something else they can't afford: forgetting May 4, 1970.

No one can afford that.

The Concorde, a lovely supersonic mess

C. L. Sulzberger

Paris — It is tragic that so beautiful an object as the Concorde supersonic plane should be at the center of such a hopeless international mess involving bad feelings among three old allies. The affair is particularly sorry because all parties involved, including France and Britain, the aircraft's manufacturers, know that whatever happens, Concorde can never pay for itself.

Ten years ago I lunched with two top men of Air France, (which then covered and probably still does) more miles than any other line. Although both were ardent about its design and aesthetic contours, they were worried about De Gaulle's prestige project, the Concorde.

Experts by that time were already starting to argue that the plane (not yet flying) was too small to be practical. It carried fewer passengers than the Boeing 707. Furthermore, some observers speculated that Concorde wouldn't be much use between Paris and New York, despite its great speed, because of the sonic boom.

Even when stretched, it doesn't have the range for really long flights such as non-stop to Johannesburg. But the air transport business had always been a tremendous gamble with decisions taken far in advance. What really hammered the nail into Concorde's elegant coffin was the sudden quadrupling in fuel prices.

Under optimum conditions, *therefore, Concorde can never amor*tize the huge investment that went into its creation. And things are far from optimum. The Port Authority of New York and New Jersey is still nastily refusing to let the Anglo-French SST have fair test trials, despite a commitment by the executive branch of the federal U.S. government.

One shouldn't forget that the Port Authority originally also prohibited landings by the Boeing 707 prototype but in the end Boeing was approved. Concorde, however, isn't even being allowed to take the test it merits. By New York state decree it is deemed "convenient" that no aircraft landing or taking off should exceed a loudness of 112 "perceived noise decibels" (generally called PNDB's).

Concorde was extensively tested near Casablanca, Morocco, under conditions approximating those of Kennedy Airfield, New York. Air France contends it met all New York conditions of 112 PNDB's. But the Port Authority — disgracefully, to my way of thinking — refuses to allow the plane to prove itself.

Nevertheless, the truth is that even if the Port Authority got honest and Concorde passed, starting regular runs between New York, London and Paris, the aircraft is a financial albatross. It uses approximately the same amount of fuel on one transatlantic trip as a jumbo 747 and carries only one-fourth the load. Moreover, the comparison is worsened because of required long subsonic, fuel-consuming approaches and departures by Concorde near inhabited areas.

The Port Authority is handling this case with maximum bad faith. It has now called into play a new kind of measurement called the "vibration rattle index" which has nothing to do with PNDB's. And even if Air France and British Airways were zipping in and out of New York, they wouldn't be clearing a profit.

In addition to gaining prestige they might, however, be in a better position then to start flights across the Soviet Union to Tokyo, surely far more practicable than Air France's flight to Caracas and British Airways' flight to Bahrein. But there is no indication of Moscow's willingness to grant Concorde clearance for overflights unless Tokyo — which is reluctant to receive Concorde anyway — first agrees to let in Moscow's own lame duck, the TU144.

Thus the diplomatic complexities of simply getting Concorde into a position to lose less money are so intricate that it is likely a brand new type of supersonic aircraft will be flying before anyone, starting with the Port Authority, has decided that honesty is the best policy.

The consequences of all this are sad. U.S. relations with France are tarnished; understandably, the French mind cannot even begin to comprehend the antics of the Port Authority or the legal limits of Washington's federal power.

If Air France could appreciably reduce present Concorde operating costs by starting a twice-daily Paris-New York service, it could certainly replace its medium and short-range outmoded, expensive Caravelles with more cost-efficient Boeing 727s or 737s as it wishes to do.

But an easier way for an Air France official to commit suicide under existing conditions — instead of proposing to buy a batch of new American Boeings — would be to jump out of the company's offices in Europe's highest building.

Ah, yes — let us count the ways

William Safire

Chicago — When Sherman Adams made a phone call to inquire of a federal official about the status of a Bernard Goldfine request, outraged Democrats pointed to a vicuna coat and demanded the scalp of President Eisenhower's chief of staff.

When Howard "Bo" Calloway was accused (falsely, as the current Harper's magazine reveals) of using his government job to help along a private project, editorial voices boomed and President Ford's campaign manager was forced to resign.

But they were Republicans. Since Democrat Bert Lance, President Carter's most influential adviser, was revealed to have used his public job to line his pockets, the trumpets of rectitude have been muted.

Lest loyal Carter men complain that a charge of using public office for private gain is excessive, let us count the ways the President's chief financial man cut his corners:

The sweetheart loan — Lance's bank put $200,000 of its depositor's money in the First National Bank of Chicago, at no interest. Within three months, and after being appointed to the Carter cabinet, Lance turned to Democrat Robert Abboud, who runs the Chicago Bank and personally borrowed $3.5 million dollars.

First Chicago's spokesman at first told reporters that officials of Lance's bank "came to us as a result of the correspondent banking relationship" to borrow Lance's money. Evidently every lawyer in the bank landed on that harried fellow's neck, because he tells me his words were "misinterpreted" — but an investigator from the controller of the currency spent all day Friday at First Chicago to determine whether an illegal "compensating balance" can be proved.

Despite denials, the full record will show that Bob Abboud's loan was one sweet deal for Lance. One hopes Sen. Abraham Ribicoff's committee will insist on a detailed, comparative analysis of that loan's terms — and its underlying collateral, which a prudent bank is obligated to examine — by the controller of the currency, else why did not the original lender — New York's Manufacturers Hanover — Manny Hanny — compete for the business?

The Teamster connection — How can an itty-bitty bank with a tiny trust department latch on to $18 million in Teamster Central States pension fund money in a presidential year? By flexing political muscle, that's how. Teamster money goes where the action is, and a non-partisan investigation will lead to Lance's bank door.

The Butcher appointment — Thanks to the investigative reporting of John Berry, Jack Egan and George Lardner Jr. of the Washington Post, who also broke the no-interest-deposit story, a vivid picture emerges of the way Lance uses his political clout to shore up his financial house of cards.

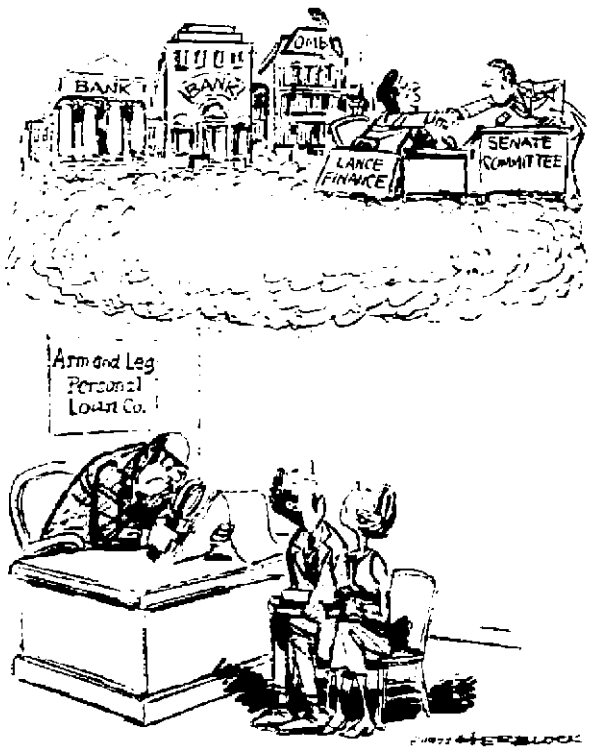
The Butcher brothers, Jake and C.H., own a few banks in Knoxville and Nashville. Their old friend, Bert Lance, is into one of their banks for $443,466 on terms not likely to be available to the average borrower.

Now that their debtor has the run of the White House, the Butcher boys thought it would be a dandy idea to get on a first-name basis with the secretary of the treasury, Michael Blumenthal.

So they called friend, Bert. "We asked for the appointment," blurted C. H. Butcher, not realizing how the truth would hurt, "because we had never met him (Blumenthal) and he does regulate our business as treasury secretary."

That candor caught Lance in the middle of a cover-up. He had enlisted his press spokesman in concocting a story that gave a quasi-public purpose to the Butcher's meeting with Secretary Blumenthal: some folderol about promoting a Knoxville exposition, which is of course of enormous concern to the secretary of the treasury.

But Mike Blumenthal knew nothing about the exposition, or why we had been asked to glad-hand these particular two bankers. Lance had never confided the real reason to his cabinet colleague: He owed the Butchers $443,000 (skip the change), and wanted to show them he could put them on a first-name basis with the man who, in C.H.'s phrase, "does regulate our business."



Sen. Ribicoff's committee might call Secretary Blumenthal to ask this question: Would he consider it ethical for him to set up an appointment between Lance and a person to whom Blumenthal owed a large sum of money? And not to disclose to Lance the real reason for the meeting, and the fact of the debt?

Not even Sherman Adams would have had the audacity to set up a date for handholding between Bernard Goldfine and a member of the cabinet.

Yet here is Bert Lance using his office to protect and improve his personal fortunes with impunity. Worse than that: One week ago, the President of the United States sent the Senate a letter about Lance's finances that was patently misleading. Who drafted that letter?

The unhappy Government Affairs Committee wants to "confront" Lance with a few newspaper clippings, let him make ringing, self-serving denials, and then claim the Senate has discharged its responsibility.

But Lance's appearance should be the beginning not the end of a serious investigation.

Tractor safety day pulls record number

By Dominick Costello
Farm Editor

Mead — It was hot and sticky, but at least 10,000 farmers came to the annual Tractor Power and Safety Day program at the University of Nebraska Field Laboratory near Mead Thursday.

A record number of exhibitors was on hand to demonstrate all sorts of machines, many foreign made, to farmers and their families.

Some farmers were amazed to learn that tractors bearing U.S. names were actually built in Germany and Italy.

The pinched state of the agricultural economy was evident in comments heard throughout the day. There was a lot of interest in cost cutting water meters by irrigators and many farmers sought out grain bin dealers for information on their product.

Farmers also were very interested in solar heating devices that might cut their ever-growing propane bills for heating buildings and drying grain.

One banker at the program said his farm customers were not coming in to settle up for the year as yet, but added "They are giving us some hints that don't sound very good."

A representative of a life insurance company said his firm was becoming more cautious about lending money to farmers because their ability to repay loans was declining.

Farmers looked at high priced machines and grumbled about low priced grain. Those from the drought striken areas in eastern Nebraska were particularly glum. "I am going to call the crop insurance man tomorrow. This is my fourth year with a very poor crop," a farmer from Ithaca said.

The extent of some farm operators' businesses, however, also was demonstrated by the huge machines and the fact that more than 30 farmers had arrived in their own aircraft to attend the program.

Huge hay bale machines were popular whether they were used to make the bales, move them or grind them into a cattle ration.

For the first time in many years, there were no small balers at the demonstration day program. There were several machines to make silage and one, made in Germany, which puts the silage into giant plastic bags.

There were many small skid steer loaders, and foreign-made hay machines including one called a hay bobber, which was said to rake hay without knocking off the leaves.

With low grain prices, an increasingly large number of the farmers were apparently lookers instead of buyers this year.

Gasohol's economic feasibility questioned

United Press International

The much discussed gasohol program for blending 10% grain alcohol with gasoline as a fuel extender should be kept in proper perspective, M. M. Van Kirk, director of information for the Nebraska Farm Bureau, said Thursday.

In recent months competent sources have raised many questions about the economic feasibility of the product and Gov. J. James Exon has asked for an independent feasibility study of the program, Van Kirk said.

In addition, he noted, the State Justice Department has questioned the legality of whether the State Gasohol Committee can supply funds for plant construction to the Nebraska Grain Alcohol and Chemical Co., made up of private individuals.

Van Kirk said a plant would hardly be a solution to the grain surplus problem and that the price of crude oil would have to go much higher for gasohol to be competitively priced without huge subsidies.

He said present grain alcohol plants are operating at 77% of capacity to supply industry and, other than for motor fuel pruposes, there appears to be no great unmet demand for grain alcohol for other uses.

On the plus side, Van Kirk said, gasohol has been tested and performs adequately. But he said it is not known whether it can be produced economically enough to sell competitively at the retail gas pump.

It is not unreasonable, unpatriotic or "against farmers," Van Kirk said, to be sure of the answers to the gasohol questions before the taxpayers have a multimillion dollar grain alcohol plant on their hands with no market for the product without unrealisitcally high subsidies.

Sterling will honor volunteer

By Dean Terrill
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Sterling — "Whenever there's work to be done, it seems like Mary is always there."

But this Sunday Mary Packwood will have the day off, at least the afternoon. A community open house is scheduled then in her honor.

The event recognizes her 33 years as dispatcher for Sterling's Volunteer Fire Department and six for its ambulance. And that's only the start of her contributions since she moved to Sterling in 1944.

"Anyone who has shown such dedication really deserves a tribute," lauded Eldonna Hazen, helping sponsor the reception. "Most of us know her best as a woman editor — hard working, well liked and always where she is needed."

Joining her publisher father on the old Cook Courier in 1922, she bought him out and four years later got national publicity as the youngest editor — age 19 — in the country. She now edits under the banner of the Johnson County Courier, though the paper was sold shortly before the 1975 death of her husband, Mike. Sterling's news is now published as a section of the Syracuse Journal Democrat.

At 71, Mrs. Packwood continues as secretary of the Sterling Improvement Association and town Library Board, posts she has held for two decades. She also is a longtime member of the Sterling Cemetery Board and put in nine years with the School Board. She helped spearhead local activities both for the state's centennial and nation's bicentennial.

A son, Richard of Lincoln, will be a special guest at the open house. Scheduled from 2 to 4 p.m., it will be at St. John's American Lutheran Church.

Officially added to the Volunteer Firemen's roster in 1970, Mrs. Packwood said the one phase of her dispatching she disliked was night calls. Every such fire meant having to rouse each volunteer from his bed.

"It never ceases to amaze me how wonderfully these guys respond," she was quoted. "Even in the middle of the night they somehow say, 'Thank you, Mary.'"

Kidnaped girl's mother pities man

Kansas City, Kan. (AP) — "You hate what he put you through and what he put Lori through, but you have to feel some pity, too, because a person would have to be sick to do a thing like that," says the mother of a young woman taken hostage during a holdup Wednesday.

"We're thankful to God it's over and she's all right," Mrs. James Taylor, mother of 18-year-old Lori Taylor, said Thursday.

Miss Taylor was abducted in the early morning hours Wednesday by a man who held up the fast-food restaurant where she worked. She escaped about 14 hours and more than 500 miles later in a Chappell, Neb., restaurant.

Paul Forsythe, 24, of Aurora, Colo., a former manager of the Kansas City, Kan., restaurant where Miss Taylor worked, was charged with kidnaping and aggravated robbery in warrants issued in Wyandotte County District Court.

Mrs. Taylor said her daughter had worked at the restaurant two years but had never met Forsythe.

Authorities said Forsythe had signed extradition papers and was scheduled to be returned to Kansas City, Kan., Friday. The FBI also was investigating the abduction because Miss Taylor was taken across state lines.

Miss Taylor, who was described as "physically okay but shook up" after she slipped out the back door of a rest room in the Chappell restaurant, was back home Thursday. Her mother refused to permit an interview with her, however.

Miss Taylor said she was told by her abductor initially that she would be released. Later, she said, the man threatened her with death several times.

Norfolk (AP) — A Norfolk man is offering a $1,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who took riding tack from his barn.

George Welsh said six saddles — including a saddle 100 years old — were taken from his barn late Tuesday or early Wednesday. He said the saddles can be easily identified. He asked that anyone with information notify the Madison County sheriff's office.

Murder count faces girl

Omaha (AP) — Lynda J. Alexander, 19, of Omaha has been charged with second degree murder in connection with the July 12 stabbing of another woman.

Oil spill charged

Omaha (AP) — United Airlines has been charged with a federal criminal offense in connection with a spill of fuel oil in early April.

U.S. Attorney Daniel Wherry said the airline is accused of discharging oil into U.S. waters and failing to immediately notify the appropriate government agency. The charge says that fuel from an underground tank belonging to United seeped into Carter Lake.

Fire damage $200,000

Falls City (AP) — A fire at the Williams Brothers Pipeline Co. north of here July 16 caused an estimated $200,000, according to fire officials.

Rural Fire Chief Dale Purvis said damage to equipment was estimated at $125,000 and $75,000 to the building.

Museum given grant

Hastings (AP) — The Hastings Museum has been awarded a $17,221 grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities. Museum director Ed Bisaillon said the money will be used to hire consultants for a one-year planning period.

The consultants will help develop a permanent exhibit tracing development of the high plains region from early times through the 20th Century, Bisaillon said.

Freese gets prison term

Omaha (AP) — Donald E. Freese, 34, of Omaha has been sentenced to one year in the federal prison for the theft of $18,000 worth of hams.

A truck driver, Freese appeared before U.S. District Court Judge Robert Denney.

It's 'the good life'

Omaha (AP) — There's a four-legged animal living the good life at the Omaha Stockyards — a 12-year-old dog named Chrissy.

The pet of Jim O'Neill, owner of J.F. O'Neill Packing Co., Chrissy has been accompanying her master on his cattle buying rounds almost every day for at least six years.

But fame has its price. Chrissy has become so popular among stockyard employes that she mooches cookies, sandwich meats and about anything edible during O'Neill's rounds every day.

Said one stockyards employe: "They call that a dog's life? I wish I had it as good."

Power planning task forces meet

Grand Island (UPI) — The Legislature's public power subcommittee met Thursday with representatives of two task forces, one set up legislatively and the other formed by various power entities.

Philip Michaels of Lincoln, industry task force vice chairman, said the group feels there are some major areas of concern that could be studied internally. He added the industry is concerned about basic service areas, rates, the structure of power agencies and the possibility of simplifying applications required by various state regulatory agencies.

Michaels said, "Many in the industry feel many utilities are trying the best way they know how to plan for the most economic power supply program for their customers. They feel some need for additional coordination between utilities and for more planning among generating utilities in the state."

State Sen. Ralph Kelly of Grand Island, who earlier resigned as chairman of the subcommittee, said the Legislature's task force is erroneously assuming various agencies such as the Public Service Commission can regulate utilities.

Exon seeks disaster declaration for Omaha

Gov. J. James Exon announced Thursday he has asked the Small Business Administration to declare portions of Omaha a disaster area as a result of last week's five-inch rain.

Low-interest loans would be made available to hard-hit homeowners and small businessmen whose homes or businesses were damaged in the storm, Exon said.

It has been determined that roads and public buildings evidently were not damaged enough to warrant federal aid, he said.

We will continue to review the situation as further figures become available, but it appears that the Small Business Administration loans are the only possible assistance that could or would be provided, he said.

If it is later determined that the flood caused extensive sewer damage additional requests for financial aid will be made.

White chides Batchelder for new policy

Democratic State Chairman Dick White of Lincoln Thursday called upon Republican State Chairman Anne Batchelder to call a halt to what he called "the unacceptable and lamentable new (GOP) policy" of distortion and innuendo.

Republicans have recently issued press releases distorting the truth about the voting records of Democratic Sen Edward Zorinsky and Democratic Rep John Cavanaugh, White said

Democrats could do the same with the voting records of Republican senators and congressmen, White said, but choose not to do so

"I know you to be a decent, honest person," White wrote Mrs. Batchelder. "And I hope that you have no wish to see the political dialogue in Nebraska deteriorate

"I hope you will join us in limiting discussions to important differences in policy and do away with, once and for all, mud-slinging and charges by innuendo.

"This joint effort to maintain a healthy political system will be appreciated by all Nebraskans "

White pointed in particular to Republican charges that Cavanaugh supported common situs picketing legislation in the House

"That is absolutely false," the chairman declared

In the past, White said, the two major parties in Nebraska have enjoyed "a cordial, constructive relationship" bereft of mud-slinging and political innuendo

But recent GOP charges "could seriously jeopardize the two-party system because of the dissemination of obviously incorrect information," he said.

Officials in both parties "must constantly take great pains to be accurate," White declared.

Existing political units must report to board

Existing political committees must file notice of their organization with the Nebraska Political Accountability and Disclosure Commission by July 31

The notices are required by the new "sunshine law" which took full effect July 1

They must include the names and addresses of principal committee officers and other basic information about the committee

"The commission realizes that many politically active organizations may not be aware of their obligations under the new law," Commission Chairman Mimi Waldbaum of Omaha said Thursday

New Real does not.

It doesn't need to. When you light up a Real, the pleasure is all natural. Because Real's flavor is all natural. Nothing artificial added.

We've discovered the way to keep natural taste in, artificial out. Of course the menthol in Real Menthol is fresh, natural. Not synthetic.

Your taste will tell the difference full, natural flavor makes. You get a rich, satisfying smoke. Taste you can feel. So taste Real...smoke natural.

Marketing problems previewed

A meeting of the Nebraska Grain Marketing and Utilization Committee on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln East Campus has reached some preliminary conclusions on this year's projected large production

Chaired by Dr. D G Hanway of the UNL Department of Agronomy, those at the meeting included Robert L Anderson of the Nebraska Grain and Feed Dealers Association, Jack Aschwege state-federal agricultural statistician, Dr M G Boosalis, chairman of the UNL department of plant pathology Willard Waldo, DeWitt farmer Dr David Keith, UNL extension entomologist, Harold Rademacher of the state ASCS office Robert Rauner of the state ASCS committee Dr Dale Anderson UNL agricultural economist, Dr Thomas Thompson UNL agricultural engineer Dr Earl Dickinson chairman of the UNL department of veterinary science, and Robert Kuzelka of the State Office of Planning and Programming

The panelists agreed that farmers who are putting their grain under ASCS loan should check on some new ASCS programs that might be to their advantage

They also agreed that, with warm weather crops an average of three weeks ahead of normal farmers should be alerted to some problems they could encounter with an early harvest in warm weather

Dr Anderson pointed out that high moisture grain will spoil quickly in warm weather perhaps before it can be dried down Thus it might be best to let the grain dry down in the field

Drs Boosalis and Keith however said there is a potential for some corn borer and stalk rot damage that could make it desirable for some farmers to harvest early

The next meeting of the group will be August 16

"I selected Mr. Costello since he appears to be the person best suited to carry out the duties of the position in keeping with the attitudes of the late Mr Peterson whom Exon described as an outstanding board member

Exon also announced the appointment of Wayne Haller to succeed Vern Clark who has resigned from the Public Buildings Safety Advisory Committee

Yellow pages ad irks Colin

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

County commissioners spent 15 minutes Thursday after noon arguing with Conciliation Court counselor Ken Vetter about $5 per month he has been spending to advertise in the vellow pages

The Conciliation Court a court mandated counseling ser vice for persons filing for divorce is listed in the telephone directory under County Offices but also under Marriage and Family Counselors

Commissioner Bob Colin feels this is unjustified adver tising Vetter provides counseling services free which are available for a fee from other agencies Colin noted

Vetter said all five District Court judges have approved the ads which cost a total of $52 per vear Hopefully, people will look in the phone book and find out about us he said

The commissioners have tentativelv cut the entire amount from Vetter s budget — not so much in an effort to pinch pen nies but as a matter of principle

I just can t buv advertising a free service Colin said

Vetter estimated about 5 of his clients come in response to the listings

Vetter also asked commissioners to restore some of the $540 in funds for out of state travel which have been tentatively nipped from his budget You re asking for stagnation among professionals he told them bv expecting county personnel to skip important meetings such as the National Association of Conciliation Courts meeting next vear in Vancouver British Columbia

Commissioner Jan Gauger noted that out-of state travel funds have been cut from all budgets on the theorv that conven tion attendance could be deferred for a vear to save money

Veterans Administration Director Den Dawson also asked for restoration of a portion of the $900 in travel and convention expenses commissioners have cut from his budget

Final decision on all budget cuts will be made following a public hearing August 9

Postcard

By Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — Rose with the dawn. (Or almost. Dawn comes dawning early now.) Looked for my biorhythm chart but must have misplaced it. The chart tells you how your day will be.

"We all have our ups and downs," says the ad for the chart. I would settle for just staying on the level. But no, says the biorhythm people.

"There are days when your inner self is in better tune with emotions. Use these days properly and improve your life."

My life would be improved if I could remember where I put things. Where did I put the biorhythm chart?

Downstairs the children grumbled over the beginning day.

"You ate up the last of the cereal, you pig!"

Speaking of memory. Elephant trainer E. P. Gee of India trained an elephant named Lakshmi. Seven years later he stopped off to see the elephant who, by that time, had a job at the London zoo.

"Lakshmi," said Gee, "it's me. Your old pal, E. P. Gee, remember?"

Well, the elephant could not remember. He looked at E. P. Gee. And it was apparent he was thinking, "The face is familiar, but I don't remember the name."

E. P. Gee then said to the press: "An elephant's mind is no more retentive than that of an average dog."

The idea that an elephant has a colossal memory was scotched for all times.

A dog in Maine has inherited $25,000 from its late owner. I always wondered how a dog takes to such riches.

I imagine the news is handled by the attorneys. Probably one of those four-decker firms — Mumble, Fumble, Grumble & Whiplash.

The dog is ushered into the walnut-paneled office and asked to sit down.

"Dog," says the senior partner, "it is my duty and pleasure to inform you that you have scored for 25 grand."

Does the dog go down and buy a ticket to the warm Bahamas? The important parts of these bequests are never told.

☆ ☆ ☆

On the subject of dogs. A London psychiatrist treated a man who barked like a dog for a year and a half. For identification, we'll call him Mr. Rover.

He was 65 when he started barking — shows it's never too late to learn. He barked every 10 minutes on the minute. He barked especially fiercely while waiting for a bus or at the dentist's office.

The doctor reported: "Extracting a tooth was more unnerving for the dentist than for the patient."

Tranquilizers and a few sessions on the couch — "Down, Rover!" — fixed him up. He only barks occasionally now.

☆ ☆ ☆

For many a feathery year Mrs. Annie McCartney scattered crumbs for the birds outside her modest home in Maine.

The other day a cardinal flew over and dropped a dollar bill.

No word of where he got the bill. Just dropped it and on he flew. (Possibly on the lam from a Brink's holdup. How else would a bird get his claws on a buck?"

Grateful birds should learn to read figures though. A hundred dollar note is no heavier to carry than a one.

☆ ☆ ☆

A pigeon flew up on our roof yesterday. He was blue and quite tame. I thought he might be carrying me a secret message: "We are trapped but shall never surrender. Signed, The Lost Battalion."

But he wasn't carrying it on his leg — where pigeons should carry messages, having no pockets.

The pigeon flew away without dropping me a crying dime.

Hearing like past debates

By Lynn Zerschling
Star Staff Writer

The age-old debate pitted state senators against state senators, doctors against doctors, church groups against church groups and even teachers against students.

And, as in the past, there were no easy answers for State Welfare Department officials who held a hearing on abortions Thursday.

The hearing was supposed to focus on whether the state should cut off Medicaid funds for non-therapeutic abortions. But, the testimony turned into a re-enactment of past debates over the morality of abortion on demand.

The hearing room was jammed with more than 200 people, mostly women, and dozens of spectators milled around in the hallways at the State Office Building. Whether by design or by chance, those favoring abortions sat in the front half of the room, while those opposing abortions filled the back.

Periodically, half of the crowd would burst into applause at a speaker's speech, while others would try to interrupt a speaker who exceeded the four-minute time limit imposed by hearing officer E. D. Warnsholz.

At one point, Warnsholz, who is the attorney for the Welfare Department, interrupted the audience, admonishing them. "This is far too grave a matter to be treated as a popularity contest."

Under the hot glare of television lights, 54 witnesses gave their views on a proposed change in policy. The new rule would prohibit abortions for women on welfare except if the pregnancy endangered the mother's life or if she threatened suicide or if the pregnancy resulted from rape or incest.

Welfare Department Director Eldon Ehrlich said initially a decision would be made on the policy within two weeks. But, following the meeting and after some criticism of his department for holding only one hearing, Ehrlich said he is considering holding other hearings around the state. Until a new policy is reached by Welfare Department staffers, the existing policy will remain in effect.

Basically, supporters of the stricter abortion rule opposed the use of their tax dollars for what they believe to be the killing of unborn children. Some even wanted the rule to be stricter.

Opponents argued the rule would discriminate against welfare recipients and turn them into "second class" citizens by denying them the right to have abortions allowed for middle and upper class women.

The argument pitted State Sens. Don Dworak of Columbus and Loran Schmit of Bellwood against Sens. Shirley Marsh and Steve Fowler, both of Lincoln.

Dworak and Schmit opposed widespread use of Medicaid funds for abortion. Dworak suggested the regulations be made even more restrictive to allow abortion only if the mother's life were endangered.

Fowler and Marsh claimed the rule, contrary to the landmark 1973 U.S. Supreme Court decision legalizing abortions, would outlaw abortions for a segment of society.

Dr. Louis C. Martin, an Omaha psychiatrist in private practice, said the suicide clause in the proposed new regulations would be "an ineffectual restraint" and would open the door to "abortion on demand."

Emmet Kenney, chairman of the psychiatry department at Creighton University, said he treats more suicidally depressed young adults as a result of abortions.

"You do not solve the problem of poverty by killing the poor," he said.

A spokesman for Omaha obstetrician Dr. Curtis Todd said the proposed rules would create two classes of patients and would insert the state into a confidential doctor-patient relationship.

Dave Piester, an attorney with Legal Services of Southeast Nebraska, said the 512 abortions Medicaid paid for in Nebraska during 1976 cost $102,150. If those 512 pregnancies had resulted in births, he estimated those children would have cost $700,000 during the first year for hospital and welfare payments.

"The economic impact of this regulation is a significant one," Piester asserted, and should be studied before a decision is made.

Joseph Kelly, director of the United Catholic Social Services, an adoption agency, called for stricter regulations on the grounds that children born as a result of rape or incest can be placed with adoptive parents.

Ann Coyne, an Omaha social worker, disputed the adoption argument. Preliminary findings from a study she is conducting shows a decrease in the number of babies available for adoption, but an increase in the number of illegitimate children. It is the younger, less educated teen-age mother who is keeping her child, Ms. Coyne said, and often that young mother must turn to welfare for continued support.

Without a recent abortion, a 26-year-old woman said she would have had to go back on welfare and quit college, a move which would have been both economically and psychologically burdensome.

Ruth Fleckenger, wife of a retired minister, said she was disturbed "at the coldheartedness I hear." Holding up a book which she said contained "gruesome" pictures of aborted fetuses, Mrs. Fleckenger claimed that women shouldn't get pregnant if they didn't want children.

That just doesn't apply to real life, said Fred Hines of Planned Parenthood in Omaha, adding, "The absence of safe, legal abortions never deterred women from seeking them."

The result of the proposed rules would be to drive the poorer women in Nebraska back to the "back alley practitioner," Hines asserted.

Regardless of what the Welfare Department decides, one man told the officials, "Whatever decision you make, it will not be popular."

Seng thought charged on insufficient evidence

Dr. William Seng, a Lincoln chiropractor charged with manslaughter in the death of a patient, should not be tried for that offense, his attorney said Thursday in Lancaster County District Court.

During a legal motion called a plea in abatement, John Stevens Berry contended Seng was bound over to the district court on insufficient evidence.

Seng is accused of negligence in the Sept. 21 death of Debra Sue Schoenrock, 14, who died of pneumonia. Lancaster County Atty. Ron Lahners has charged Seng was treating her chiropractically, when she needed medical treatment.

Berry said that Miss Schoenrock was seeing a physician for her medical symptoms, while Seng was treating the girl chiropractically for pain.

Seng knew the girl was seeing a physician, and could not tell her to go to another physician for treatment, Berry said.

District Judge Willima Hastings said the law in such cases was vague and he would need time to consider the motion. Hastings said he would make a ruling as soon as he could.

Hy-Gain idle one week

Five hundred employes of the Hy-Gain Electronics Corp. Lincoln plant will return to work Aug. 1, following a one-week production shutdown.

A week's production shutdown should help us to adjust inventories and keep us from building up an even larger one this year," said Jack Whitcomb, corporate human relations director. Shipping and order-taking departments have remained [illegible] operations manager Howard Sachs signed a $2.2 million contract with the U.S. Army earlier this week for production of an electronic mobile multi-frequency antenna. [illegible] last year's $5.7 million on gross sales of $20.4 million during the quarter which ended May 28.

Despite furor, customs still can open letters

Washington (AP) — Despite bitter criticism from lawmakers about illegal mail openings, the Postal Service said Thursday it will continue to allow customs agents to open letters from abroad

"You have completely abrogated your authority over the mail entrusted to you," an angry Rep Theodore S Weiss, D-N Y , told postal officials at a House Government Operations subcomittee hearing Other panel members echoed his sentiments

Postal officials acknowledged that customs agents have violated laws and government procedures that allow them 'to open mail without a search warrant only when they suspect a letter contains illegal drugs or other contraband

But they said turning over mail to the Customs Service would continue "We have to expect the other agency to comply with the regulations, ' said Assistant General Counsel Charles R Braun

Meanwhile, the Customs Service issued a series of proposed new rules spelling out under what circumstances its agents can open mail

In the last fiscal year, Customs opened about 270,000 envelopes, 48,000 of which contained prohibited or dutiable items, according to figures gathered by the subcommittee

Customs began opening mail entering the country in 1971 Usually, mail is opened after a dog trained to sniff illegal drugs has reacted to a letter

But the subcommittee was told about several incidents in which the Customs Service flagrantly violated letter-opening rules

In one program, now ended according to the Postal Service, customs officials in New York for several years allowed military investigators to open and read letters without the required search warrants

Postal officials also allowed customs agents to open some domestic mail in Port Isabel, Tex , in 1975, and agents illegally read mail in a year-long customs investigation in Tennessee

A postal inspector also said "a number of mail theft cases involving customs employes" have been referred to the Justice Department for prosecution

"One of the last areas of privacy a citizen has is the privacy of his mail To open someone's mail is the same thing as burglary," charged Rep Leo J Ryan, D-Calif "I am incensed by the whole policy and the way it is carried out by the Postal Service "

He called the practice "closing your eyes to what the Customs Service does '

Customs officials were expected to testify at a future hearing

It was the first congressional hearing into illegal mail openings by the government since massive FBI and CIA programs to open mail were exposed several years ago Those letters also were handed over by the Postal Service

The customs inspection, sanctioned by a Supreme Court decision last month, is the only time a letter can legally be opened without a search warrant No warrant is needed to open packages, which courts have ruled are not covered by the constitutional ban on unreasonable searches

The Customs Service's proposed new rules, published in the Federal Register on Thursday, include these provisions

— Letters containing correspondence only cannot be opened without a search warrant

— Sealed letters from outside the country may be opened if they appear to contain something other than correspondence

— Agents may not read the contents of an opened letter unless a search warrant has been obtained

The service asked for public comment by Sept 26 on the proposal

Tonry was 'surprised by sentence.'

Tonry wanted to keep seat, instead he got sentence, fine

New Orleans (UPI) — Former Rep Richard Tonry, D-La , who once urged fellow congressmen to "keep my seat warm" while he answered to charges of fraudulently winning a Democratic primary, Thursday was sentenced to a year in prison and fined $10,000 for violating federal election laws

The sentence also included a three-year inactive probation period during which Tonry can neither run for office nor participate in politics

An uncharacteristically subdued Tonry told reporters outside the courtroom he was a victim of machine politics and was "surprised by the sentence "

"I'm sorry to hear the sentence," the former Jesuit seminarian said "I didn't expect it '

In a plea bargaining agreement just four days before his scheduled July trial, Tonry had pleaded guilty to four misdemeanors, including the acceptance of illegal campaign contributions and the promising of political favors

In return, the Justice Department dropped six other counts — including two felonies — against Tonry and eight charges against J Wayne Mumphrey, his law partner and campaign manager

Tonry, 42, was an unknown Chalmette, La , state legislator when he stunned political observers last summer by finishing second in an eight-man Democratic primary race

He then defeated favorite James Moreau in an October runoff He easily defeated a token Republican candidate in the November election to succeed retired Rep F Edward Hebert, D-La

His margin of victory in the runoff was a scant 184 votes and Moreau claimed Tonry's supporters cast illegal ballots A subsequent federal investigation substantiated Moreau's claim and two dozen poll officials in Tonry's home area pleaded guilty to casting more than 400 fraudulent votes

Tonry remained in office until a House committee verified the vote fraud He resigned from Congress May 4 telling his congressional friends to keep my seat warm ' until he returned He was defeated for renomination in a June 25 Democratic primary

Although they are misdemeanors, I believe the criminal acts to which you plead guilty are serious and should not be taken lightly by anyone in public office, Judge Schwartz told Tonry

The judge set no date for Tonry to begin the prison term but told him to surrender within a reasonable period

Charles says Commonwealth doesn't need Britain

London (UPI) — Prince Charles said Thursday he thinks the Commonwealth would manage to survive even if Britain pulled out

"I don t think it would be a disaster if Britain withdrew from the Commonwealth, and I am sure it could survive without Britain ' he told 200 delegates to a Commonwealth youth conference

The heir to the British throne said Britain might represent the center of the Commonwealth only because the head of the Commonwealth resides here '

He said his mother, the queen plays "an important part of keeping the whole thing together ' but the Commonwealth "is a wider family than it was "

Sydney, Australia (UPI) — Italy's Lloyd Triestino, one of the last shipping lines providing regular passenger service between Australia and Europe, has halted operations, a spokesman for the line said

He said the service was withdrawn following Italian government legislation to reorganize government-controlled shipping lines, of which Lloyd Triestino forms a part The withdrawal leaves only one line, the Greek-owned Chandris line, regularly employed on the Australia-Europe passenger ship route

It's Your Money

By Jane Bryant Quinn

Can you afford house?

New York — People looking for a new house often grossly over-estimate what they can afford to pay. This is particularly true of first-time homebuyers, although it happens to the more experienced as well. After weeks of searching for the house of their dreams, they're brought up sharply at the office of the bank or savings and loan, when their application for a mortgage is turned down.

There's a simple way to avoid this, which almost no one does: Visit the bank before you go househunting, to see how much you can actually borrow. But most people start with the real estate agent, and go so far as to make an offer on a house before they learn that they've overreached their incomes.

Two cases with which I'm personally familiar illustrate the situation.

The first is a young couple making $17,000 a year. The rule of thumb is that you can afford a house worth two and a half times your annual income. Going by that standard, they looked at houses selling for around $42,500. They planned to put $5,500 down.

But they didn't know about another rule of thumb used by banks and S&Ls. It's that mortgage payments and property taxes shouldn't take more than 25% of annual income. Because of their low down payment, the size mortgage they needed would have put them over the 25% limit, so they were turned down when they applied.

At a mortgage rate of 8¾%, and considering tax rates in their area, all they could borrow was $29,000. Together with the $5,500 they already had, the most they could pay for a house was $34,500. Fortunately, this didn't put them out of the housing market entirely, since the median price for an older house is in the area of $33,000.

The second case is an older couple that has worked for years in order to be able to afford a house. Between them they make $22,000, and can afford to put $7,000 down. They made an offer of $48,000 on a house. Since mortgage rates in their area were only 8½%, the monthly mortgage and property-tax payments came in just under 25% of their income. But their mortgage application was turned down anyway. Why?

There's yet another bank and S&L rule of thumb: it says that a borrower's mortgage, taxes, home insurance plus other long-term debt can't exceed 30% of annual income. This couple was making payments on two cars and a piece of vacation land in New York's Catskill mountains. Those debts, when added to the mortgage they needed, pushed their total monthly payments over the 30% limit.

The bank would lend them only $37,000, which limited their housing choices to a top price of $44,000.

To avoid the disappointment of hunting for a house and then finding you can't afford it, the smart homebuyer goes to the bank or S&L even before making contact with a real estate agent. Explain your situation, and say that you're trying to find out approximately how much you can borrow. The bank will look at your income and debt, and give you a ballpark answer.

If you learn that you can't borrow more than say $40,000 and you have $5,000 in cash, you'll know in advance that you can't afford a house costing any more than $45,000 (and perhaps less, once you consider the closing costs).

With this exception: Once the real estate agent knows your borrowing limits, he may be able to find a more expensive house where the seller is able to give a second mortgage. If the seller will [illegible] $5,000 payable in five [illegible] $5,000 in [illegible] $40,000 mortgage will [illegible] $45,000 house [illegible] can meet [illegible] payments.

Alyeska restarts pumps on oil pipeline

Valdez, Alaska (AP) — Technicians restarted the pumps on the trans-Alaska pipeline Thursday, hoping the first oil in the 800-mile pipeline would reach the terminal here without further delay

The technicians started the pumps again after completing government-ordered repairs on 14 welds in the oil terminal at this ice-free port on Alaska s southern coast

The pipeline was shut down for about 12 hours while the repairs were made It was the fifth delay in 38 days

A spokesman for Alyeska Pipeline Service Co said the leading edge of the oil should began gushing into storage tanks about 12 hours after the pumps were started

The pipeline has been plagued with explosions a cracked section of pipe power supply problems and faulty welds since the oil began moving five weeks ago

The pipeline was restarted at 9 50 a m local time (3 50 p m CDT)

An Alyeska spokesman said that federal officials have not formally approved the weld work but still gave the consortium of oil companies permission to restart the line

Department of Transportation officials said the welds were faulty and didn t meet federal safety standards

But Alyeska noted that the questioned sections of pipe had withstood testing pressures two-and-a half times those of normal pipeline operations Alyeska also denied the contention that it was notified of the alleged flaws a week ago

This is very frustrating," said one Alyeska official

Federal officials confirmed the pipe had been successfully tested, and acknowledged that the stoppage largely was a matter of regulation, not the integrity of the pipeline "

Alyeska had intended to deliver the Prudhoe Bay crude to storage tanks here Wednesday well within the Aug 1 project completion deadline the firm imposed on itself three years ago

But the last-minute shutdown raised the possibility that two supertankers scheduled to transport the first load of oil from the $7 7 billion pipeline could arrive here before the oil

Two tankers currently are steaming toward Valdez — the 120 000-ton ARCO Juneau and the 80,000-ton Sohio Intrepid The Juneau was scheduled to dock Saturday

It was expected to take several days to fill storage tanks before the oil can be loaded into the Juneau, which will haul the first load of Alaska crude to an ARCO refinery at Cherry Point, Wash The Sohio load is destined for a refinery in California

Both tankers are scheduled to unload their cargos within a few days of each other sometime next month

Federal officials said Wednesday that Alyeska was advised July 21 that 11 welds inside the terminal were not up to standard, and three more faulty welds were found following the initial notification

Alyeska started its pipeline pumps at Prudhoe Bay on June 20, but the oil's progress has been halted time and time again by accidents attributed to human error

In the most serious mishap, one worker was killed in an explosion at Pump Station No 8 near Fairbanks on July 8 and the line was shut down for 10 days

Mailboxes yielded more than letters

Bridgeport, W. Va (AP) — Harrison County officials are looking for a Robin Hood who passed out a different kind of "dough" to area residents

Rural mailboxes along the Green Valley section were stuffed with loaves of bread

"I just couldn't understand it, it (the mailbox) was stuffed full of bread I thought somebody was playing a trick, ' said Mrs Charles Cleer

Datsun's tags are going up

Detroit (AP) — Prices on Datsun cars and trucks shipped as of Aug 1 are going up an average 3 8%, or about $150 per vehicle, the third price boost since last fall

Nissan U S A , the distributor for Datsun, which is the No 2 selling import in the country, said that the increases on cars range from $110 for the B 210 Honeybee to $280 for the 280Z

Migrant farm workers find jobs scarce, wages worse

Denver (AP) — Thousands of migrant farm workers driven from other states by drought and poor crops have come to Colorado in search of work But there aren t many jobs

The migrants are fiercely competitive for what work there is Some crew chiefs — those who hire workers for farmers — reportedly are taking advantage of the situation

Dick Ginsburg an attorney for the Colorado Rural Legal Services and supervisor of the farm workers program in Greeley said crew leaders are running wild and taking advantage of the migrants

' The migrants are concerned about retaliation and don t file complaints A job at $1 20 an hour is better than no job at all he said

He gave these examples

—A family of five is reportedly working the cucumber fields of LaSalle in northern Colorado making 34 cents an hour per person

—Sugar beet workers in Granada reportedly were paid with bad checks and a crew leader there was said to have refused to pay a worker $200 in wages for so-called stoop labor

—A worker came to Weld County saying he had contracted to hoe 3s0 acres of beets at $16 an acre He was reportedly told by the grower that he could do them at $10 and if he wouldn t We ve got people from Mexico

There are an estimated 30 000 migrant farm workers in Colorado but workers say the state has made no effort to make it known there isn t much work available

The labor department s new director Robert Ore was to meet with members of the Colorado Migrant Council on Friday or Saturday to discuss violations of the minimum wage law the hiring of illegal aliens, substandard migrant housing and unsafe working conditions

We re a little confused about what s causing these problems now," Ore said 'Apparently the drought and high unemployment in the farm labor market is putting people in a squeeze Problems seem to be accelerating

Luis Jaramillo migrant council director, says farm workers are moving to Colorado from as far away as Florida where frost damaged the fruit crop, and from drought-stricken northwestern states

Wages are being depressed by the oversupply of labor he said We ve had hundreds of families come into our office looking for emergency food — probably twice what there were last year

According to Jaramillo growers are employing more illegal aliens because such workers don t complain about low wages and housing which he described as ' akin to chicken coops

Other schools don't want toenails

Chicago (AP) — The University of Chicago doesn t want your toenails and neither does Northwestern Loyola University does

That s the message Carl E Moore chairman of Loyola s chemistry department sent out to end confusion over his unique toenail collecting project He complained that a number of persons who read of the project recently had sent their toenail clippings to the wrong universities

Moore said that when the researchers first found traces of gold in toenail clippings they assumed that the metal must have been transferred through the body from dental fillings Further research revealed however, that there was gold even in the toenails of newborn infants

Now Moore and the others are trying to discover and study all the trace elements in the human toenail so they ve been requesting toenail clippings from anyone who wants to send them in

The problem though is that many of the people who have heard of the project have been sending the clippings to other Chicago-area universities which have no toenail projects

Capitol bats said no danger

Nebraska's Big Brown Bat and Red Tree Bat do not drink blood.

Although it doesn't have a belfry, the Nebraska Capitol does have a population of bats.

But don't cancel any plans to visit the Capitol because you're afraid of bats. They're relatively harmless, according to Dr. Harvey Gunderson, University of Nebraska-Lincoln mammologist.

Capitol building Superintendent Paul Stoehr called Gunderson in the spring when the bats were getting out of hand. They weren't bothering anyone, but the bat guano was piling up around their hiding places and rain made it drip down the sides of the building.

Although they have been screened off from their favorite places, some of the Statehouse's bats still remain in and around the building. They spend their days sleeping upsidedown in the shade of the stone window lattices. In the evenings they dive for bugs around the building.

"People are scared to death of them," Gunderson said. "But they're really very beneficial."

They eat insects, and are usually overhead whenever you take a walk in the evening, Gunderson noted. The two Nebraska varieties, the Big Brown Bat and the Red Trees Bat, do not drink blood. For the most part, bats will go out of their way to leave people alone.

The Capitol bats, which are Big Browns, have been more beneficial than just catching bugs. Gunderson and a team of researchers captured about nine of them this spring to study parasites and the bat's radar-like hearing system.

The Statehouse's problem is not unusual, Gunderson said. "In just about any old building you're liable to have bats," he said.

To drive them out, Gunderson suggests placing a strong smelling substance such as mothballs or creosote in their hiding places. When the bats leave, all openings such as vents and windows should be covered with a fine mesh screen.

Like many other mammals, bats can transmit rabies, Gunderson said. But the chance of that happening in Lincoln is slim since the incidence of rabies here is low, he said. A rabid bat will also be sluggish and not flying around.

Gunderson said there was no more reason to exterminate all the bats because they might contract rabies than to kill all dogs because a few might be rabid.

Rodin sculpture display ineptly, illogically handled

By H. L. Hoffmaster
Star Staff Writer

Review

Despite inept, irrational display, "The Burghers of Calais" lives at Sheldon Art Gallery.

A dozen and one-half small scale preliminary figures which were eventually evolved by Auguste Rodin into the landmark testimony to heroism are on display until Aug. 15.

There is a charge for the exhibit: $1 per adult, 50¢ per child. Nebraska Art Association members are admitted free.

"Burghers" needs verbal explanation and there is enough of that at Sheldon's showing.

In the 14th Century, English King Edward III beseiged the French city of Calais and pledged not to raze the town and kill everyone if six citizens would present themselves as sacrifice to him.

Six burghers (middle-class townsmen) did so. King Edward intended to kill them but was dissuaded by his queen.

It is an incredible, powerful story that was matched by the master, Rodin, five centuries later with a monumental sculpture that remains one of art history's most remarkable castings.

Sheldon is showing small pieces that are supposed to demonstrate the progression to the full-scale "Burhers".

It's an overwhelming temptation to say somebody made hamburgher of the exhibit for "Burhers" needs coordinated visual explanation and there is very little of that.

There is a small, preliminary grouping of the six figures, but no small, completed grouping nearby for comparison. There are large photos on the walls, one in a different room and the other across from the small grouping so that some energetic walking and head rotation is necessary to collate.

Figures are not displayed evolutionally or chronologically.

Except that viewers have time to walk back and forth between the display areas several times with their jotted notes and sketches to remember names, faces and sculpture postures, the exhibit is incomprehensible.

If you want to really understand how "Burghers" got from preliminaries to completion you will have to go to the library, not Sheldon. Or buy the book that is on sale for $2.50.

Not that that's a good reason to skip the show because any chance to see any Rodin is a chance not to be avoided.

The examples of his sculpture are what Rodin means to the art: grace, power, subtlety, definitive impressionism, originality, intellect.

Along with the Rodin exhibit, the gallery has selected contemporary paintings from the late 19th Century and placed them in three display rooms on the south second floor where "Burghers" is showing. That portion of the exhibit is free.

Museum hosts exhibit on cafes

Paris (UPI) — Visitors to Paris' new museum of modern art, the Centre Beaubourg, will be able to acquaint themselves this summer with the history of France's oldest popular institution, the cafe.

The museum is hosting a large exhibit of all the accessories of the cafe, from its origins until today, plus an exhibit showing all the French proverbs stemming from the institution.

Massage parlor regulations strict

Houston (AP) — Massage parlor patrons must register their names and addresses and parlor employes must meet a dress code and complete a one-year college level course in human anatomy and physiology, under regulations approved by the Harris County commissioners.

The regulations, which apply to unincorporated areas of the county, also prohibit a customer from receiving a massage from a parlor employe of the opposite sex.

Sheriff Jack Heard said the regulations approved Thursday would close "houses of prostitution advertised as houses of massage."

The commissioners also levied an annual license fee of $500 for each parlor and each masseur or masseuse must pay a $100 fee.

The regulations also require employes to wear white, opague clothing. Legs may not be exposed more than six inches above the knee.

Rebecca Dalton, a lawyer who has represented massage parlors in court, said the regulations will benefit legitimate parlors that are not fronts for prostitution.

Police supply free mittens

Chicago (UPI) — Dog owners who walk their pets on Chicago's North Side streets and parks can pick up free plastic mittens to clean up their dogs' droppings, compliments of the police department.

The purpose of the mittens, according to police, is to let dog owners "deposit the whole thing in the nearest garbage can," rather than leave the droppings where other people will object.

Police said the program is illegal but they do not plan to enforce a 1945 law which bars using trash cans for such purposes.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am very much in love with a bachelor who lives alone in my building. I'm a divorcee also living alone. It all started with a "good morning" when we were both walking our dogs. (He has two.)

Pretty soon he asked me to walk his dogs while walking my own. Then he started coming in after work every evening for a drink. I invited him to dinner several times and we'd watch TV, play backgammon and neck a little. He seems to like me but he never invited me out. Meanwhile I fell for him — but hard!

Two months ago he said he was going away for the weekend, and I was sure he was going to ask me to go along, but instead he asked me to keep his dogs!

When he came back for the dogs he spent the night with me. After that I couldn't get him off my mind.

Now he goes away every weekend and leaves his dogs with me, and when he comes back, he stays all night. He's driving me crazy. I told him I was in love with him, but he's never committed himself. How can I get him interested in me? I feel like a 40-year-old teenager.

FORTY AND FOOLISH

DEAR FOOLISH: As I see it, your neighbor sleeps with you occasionally in exchange for your looking after his dogs. It's a good deal for him, but a dog's life for you. There's no way you can get him "interested" in you. Break it off now. The longer you wait the more painful it will be.

DEAR ABBY: What is your opinion of a person who can't pass a mirror without taking a good long look at herself? Wouldn't you say that she was very conceited?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Not necessarily. She could be exactly the opposite. Very insecure.

DEAR ABBY: A widowed friend of mine is 50, very wealthy, very attractive and a lovely woman. She recently confided that she longs to marry but can't seem to attract a man.

I ache to tell her that the strikingly snow-white hair she takes enormous pride in WAS an asset when she was in her 30s and was prematurely gray, but now it makes her look like an old woman.

She hasn't asked for any advice and is oblivious to my hints, yet she keeps suggested that I introduce her to my eligible friends her age. I know that these men think she is too "old" for them because of her white hair.

She still thinks that like Samson her strength lies in her hair. Dare I destroy her self-image for "her own good"?

HER CONFIDANT

DEAR CONFIDANT: If she doesn't ask for your advice, don't offer any. There just may be some men who LIKE white hair on women.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for 11 years and have one child, age 9. My husband seems to think all he has to do is pay the bills, go to work, and his obligation as a husband and father is paid in full.

He goes off every weekend and we have no idea where he is. When I ask him, he says it's none of my business. I sounds like he has a woman somewhere.

I went to a marriage counselor and he said, "If you had the trouble most married women have, you'd think you were in heaven. As long as he supports you and your child, doesn't drink, use drugs or hit you, disappearing every weekend is a minor fault. Get yourself a boyfriend, and don't complain."

Abby, I don't want a boyfriend. I want my husband home weekends. Am I expecting too much? I'm 29 and he is 33, and this weekend disappearing act has been going on for nearly three years.

Can you help me?

SICK OF IT

DEAR SICK: First, find yourself another counselor. I see nothing wrong with putting a "full-time husband" high on your list of priorities. Your husband's weekends ARE your business.

Solvent refined coal burns without polluting air

Atlanta (UPI) — The nation's largest utility conglomerate has announced the successful testing of a refined, clean-burning coal which it said could drastically reduce America's dependence on foreign oil.

Alvin W. Vogtle Jr., president of the Southern Company, termed as "an unqualified technical success" the first test burning of a fuel called solvent refined coal.

Congress currently is considering legislation that would authorize federal funding with private industry of a solvent refining demonstration plant at an estimated cost of $300 million. The facility, which could be operational by as early as 1981, would turn at least 2,000 tons of raw coal a day into clean fuel.

Vogtle told a news conference the new fuel ensures protection of the environment and puts to good use this country's vast reserves of coal.

Vogtle said commercial use of the refined coal might hike the cost of electricity by 30% but that the same increase would occur if utilities were forced to install expensive scrubbers to prevent air pollution caused by burning unrefined, high-sulfur coal.

The refined coal was developed at a small pilot plant operated by Southern near Wilsonville, Ala.

Put your knowledge of bidding to the test

By B. Jay Becker

Bridge

Partner bids One Club. What would you respond with each of the following four hands?

1. ♠KJ92 ♥QJ74 ♦Q63 ♣85
2. ♠AQ5 ♥KJ62 ♦AJ9 ♣Q76
3. ♠AQ87 ♥AJ95 ♦AK874 ♣—
4. ♠93 ♥J9532 ♦AKQJ ♣Q9

1. One heart. When partner opens the bidding with one of a suit, you should respond with 6 or more points in high cards. You don't expect to make game when you have only 6 points — partner will seldom hold 20 points — but you keep the bidding alive to cover that possibility.

When you hold 9 points, the chance for game is substantially increased — though it's still nothing to get excited about. With 9 points you plan to bid once and gracefully retire from the picture unless partner's rebid indicates good game prospects — for example, if he makes a jump rebid. In that case you bid again.

As you tentatively plan to bid only once, it is better to respond one heart than one spade. This permits either a spade or heart fit to be found, whereas a one spade response might result in never finding a heart fit if partner had four hearts.

It would be wrong to respond one notrump. The search for a major suit fit comes first.

2. Three notrump. This shows 16 or 17 points, notrump distribution (usually 4-3-3-3), and all-around strength. Naturally, three notrump suggests at least mild interest in a slam if partner has more than a minimum opening bid.

3. One diamond. This is an enormous hand to hold opposite an opening bid, but its overall value is greatly impaired when partner bids your void. Had he opened the bidding with a spade, a heart, or a diamond, nothing short of an earthquake would stop you from eventually contracting for either six or seven. But opposite a one club bid it's best to pull in your horns until a suit fit is located.

A modest response of one diamond (not two) is all that is necessary at this point. One diamond is 100 per cent forcing. You respond in the longest suit first, so that if or when you bid spades or hearts later on, partner will know that they are four-card suits.

4. One heart. To respond one diamond would be incorrect. Suits are practically always bid according to their length, not their strength. The aim is to find the suit in which there is the greatest combined length. High-card content is only a secondary factor.

Newly minted coins seized in one of biggest robberies

Paris (AP) — Bandits seized a yellow truck carrying $3.54 million in newly minted coins Thursday in one of the world's biggest robberies, authorities said.

The truck and 15 tons of bronze-colored 10-franc coins were the object of a massive search, but the thieves had a 30-minute jump and police indicated they had no leads. The robbers apparently acted on inside information.

Police said the coins, about the size of a U.S. 50-cent piece and worth a little over $2, were in a container that was en route from a mint in southern France to the central Bank of France in Paris.

A railroad official said there "must have been complicity somewhere along the line."

Authorities gave this account of the heist:

The bank said the container left the mint at Pessac, near Bordeaux, Wednesday and arrived at the Paris station Thursday morning. The green container, marked with the container company's initials CNC, was labeled as containing "metal products."

Three or four armed men ran a car in front of a tractor-trailer truck taking the container out of the Gare de Lyon railroad station in eastern Paris. They forced the unarmed driver and assistant into another car and drove the truck away.

The operation was described as fast and smooth and there were no known witnesses.

Japan wins TV victory

Washington (AP) — Japanese television manufacturers won a major victory Thursday when a federal appeals court ruled that the United States cannot impose a special duty on their products.

The United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals overturned a decision by a New York customs court which had said the Treasury Department must set the duties — thereby raising the price — on electronic products exported from Japan. The duty never has been imposed.

Labor chief Marshall backs same minimum wage for youths

Washington (AP) — Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said Thursday the minimum wage should be the same for both youths and adults.

Marshall testified about the minimum wage before a Senate human resources subcommittee as the House prepared to debate a bill that would raise the minimum wage. A final vote on the bill may not come until September when Congress returns from its August recess.

The bill before the House has the support of the Carter administration and organized labor. It would raise the $2.30 hourly minimum wage to $2.65, with increases to $2.89 an hour in January 1979 and $3.15 an hour in January 1980.

Future increases in the minimum would be tied to an automatic formula making the minimum equal to 53% of the average blue collar wage. The bill does not distinguish between youth and adults.

Supporters of a lower minimum wage for young people say it would help cut unemployment among young people. They point out that teenage joblessness has remained high while the general unemployment rate has dropped slightly in the last year.

Marshall agreed that young people do need help but said a lower minimum wage is not the way to do it.

He also said the Carter administration has put before Congress an array of proposals to combat teen-age unemployment with up to 600,000 new public service jobs and job-training programs.

Marshall said the government is already moving on programs to provide skills training and on-the-job training for young people and is better able to do this than private employers who more often use a revolving-door approach to teen-age workers.

Tallahassee Fla (AP) — State Sen Jack Gordon has confounded just about everyone by disclosing a $105 gift from "The Beer Fairy," an unidentified lobbyist

Gordon's gift disclosure form on file with the state Elections Division shows only two entries for the 1976 calendar year $75 from Disneyworld and $105 from "The Beer Fairy"

The Miami Beach Democrat says the gift was from someone — he never found out who — who kept leaving cases of beer at his Tallahassee apartment during the 1976 session, when Gordon was chairman of the senate appropriations committee

"I don't know why he singled me out" Gordon said "I felt it ought to be reported so I decided to make up a name"

Under Florida law, elected state officials are required to report annually every gift they receive worth more than $25, as well as the giver's name and address For the Beer Fairy's address, Gordon typed in "Your Guess Is As Good As Mine"

Record-tying score aids Jones' chances

By Chuck Sinclair
Staff Sports Writer

Wednesday night, Knox Jones was unsure of his chances of making the low 54 cut for the final two days of the Nebraska State Amateur Golf Championships at Hillcrest Country Club after opening with a five-over-par 77.

His thinking changed dramatically Thursday as he vaulted into contention with a course-record-tying eight-under-par 64.

The recently graduated member of Lincoln Southeast's state high school championship team toured the front nine in five-under-par 31 and followed with a three-under 33 coming home, missing a four-foot putt on 18 that would have given him sole possession of the record shared by Ky Laffoon, Bud Williamson Jr. and Matt Taber.

"After shooting a 77 the first day, wondering whether I was going to make the cut was legitimate," said Jones, whose score left him three strokes off the pace set by Craig Moyer, who fashioned a four-under 68.

Even after a birdie on the opening hole, a 476-yard par five, Jones still wasn't sure he could play any better than he had the day before.

The first hint came on the 443-yard par four second hole.

Jones thought he might have hit his tee shot out of bounds on the right side, so he hit a provisional ball, just in case.

When he reached his ball, it was still in bounds, so he promptly dropped an 8-iron into the cup for an eagle two.

"That's when I thought I might have a decent shot at a good score," Jones admitted. "After I saw the shot going towards the pin I asked the kid out in the fairway if was close. He said, 'I think it went in.' "

Jones followed that feat with birdies on the fourth, sixth and seventh holes before closing the front nine with a bogey.

After another bogey on 10, Jones thought his dream was over.

"I thought the letdown was coming," he said. "I figured maybe I would just have an average round then."

Those thoughts continued on No. 11 when he hooked his tee ball into the trees on the par five. But, he followed that with a six-iron safely back into the fairway, dropped a wedge one-foot from the pin and salvaged a birdie.

Jones birdied 14, 16 and 17 down the stretch to etch his name in the Hillcrest record book. His 64 is also believed to be the best score ever shot in the state championships

Jones got a little boost when his father Dave showed up unexpectedly on the 14th hole

"I was really surprised to see him," Knox said. "He hadn't been out to watch me for three years. As soon as I saw him, I chipped in for a birdie on 14 with my eight-iron. That eight-iron was gold for me today."

"I don't know why I came out today," Dave said. "I just had a doctor's appointment and figured why not? I'm glad I did, he was unconscious "

"I came up to him on 14 and asked how he was doing," he added "He said he was struggling. Then he said he had a 31 on the front. I couldn't believe it "

A hint of the kind of luck Jones was experiencing was witnessed by the gallery on the closing hole. His four-iron approach shot was destined to fall short into the sand guarding the right front of the green, but it hit the handle of a rake in front and dropped short It evened out when he missed his closing putt.

"I blew it," he said. "I knew I was going for the course record when I hit the chip and blew the putt When I was over the putt, it seemed like I'd been there all day long I figured sooner or later, I'd have to miss one "

Moyer didn't miss many putts in his round either, setting the stage for an exciting final two days with he and state match play champion Larry Sock separated by just two shots. Sock also fired a 68 Thursday to go with Wednesday's even par 72.

Although Moyer has graduated from Nebraska, both Jones and Sock will be there next year — Jones as a freshman and Sock a transfer senior from Oklahoma State.

Head-to-head competition is not new to Moyer and Sock. The pair dueled it out in the Class C state high school championships when Moyer was at Wood River and Sock at Norfolk Catholic.

Sock won that confrontation with a 69 at Norfolk Country Club while Moyer had 74.

In their latest meeting, Sock defeated Moyer 2 and 1 in the state match play semifinals.

"He always seems to beat me," Moyer said. "But I want to change that now, with this tournament."

Moyer played the final two holes in the rain, before it got so heavy that play was suspended for nearly an hour and a half. The final threesom putted out just before 8 p.m.

A score of 153 or better was required to make the cut to the top 54 golfers and ties for the final two days of play.

Cubs out-homer Reds; Yankees win

United Press International

Dave Rosello singled with two out in the 13th inning Thursday to score winning pitcher Rick Reuschel from third base and give the Chicago Cubs a 16-15 victory over the Cincinnati Reds in a slugfest in which two major league home run records were tied.

The loss dropped the Reds 12 1-2 games behind the Dodgers in the National League West.

The Cubs hit six homers and Cincinnati five. The total of 11 equalled the major league record for an extra inning game set Aug. 12, 1966, in 13 innings when Pittsburgh hit six and Cincinnati five.

Reuschel, who received credit for his 15th win against three losses, singled with two out in the 13th and went to third on Steve Ontiveros' single before Rosello's hit. The Reds had taken a 15-14 lead in the 12th when George Foster doubled and scored on Rosello's error, but George Mitterwald hit his second home run of the game in the same inning to tie the score again.

Pinch-hitter Reggie Smith walked with none out and the bases filled in the ninth inning forcing in Bill Russell and giving the Los Angeles Dodgers a 2-1 win over the Philadelphia Phillies. Russell led off the ninth with a triple and Steve Garvey and Ron Cey were intentionally walked setting the stage for Smith. Cey homered in the fourth inning and the Phillies tied the score at 1-1 in the fifth on an RBI singled by Garry Maddox.

In night games, Pittsburgh downed Houston 9-4 and St. Louis blanked Atlanta 3-0.

Bill Robinson hit a grand slam homer and Jim Rooker gained his ninth victory as the Pirates won their eighth game in a row and moved into second place in the NL East. Phil Garner also homered for Pittsburgh while Bob Watson and Joe Ferguson homered for Houston.

Rookie John Urrea tossed a five-hitter and Garry Templeton tripled home a pair of runs to spark the Cardinals to their sixth straight victory. Urrea, making only his second major league start, was aided by three double plays and faced the minimum number of batters in eight innings.

The New York Yankees treated a trio of former teammates with little brotherly love Thursday afternoon, and the Baltimore Orioles paid a heavy price.

The Yankees took the deciding game of the three-game series by a 14-2 margin, hammering three Orioles' hurlers for 15 hits and three home runs to move within two games of first-place Baltimore in the American League East.

Eleven-game winner Rudy May, a former Yankee, never got out of the third inning as New York tagged him for five hits and five runs, including Thurman Munson's 14th homer of the season. Ex-Yankee Scott McGregor was raked for eight more hits in 4 1-3 innings, including a two-run shot by Graig Nettles. Roy White blasted another two-run homer for New York in the eighth off yet another ex-Yankee, Tippy Martinez.

In night games, Texas topped Toronto 3-0, Kansas City edged Cleveland 5-4 in 11 innings and Oakland whipped California 6-4.

Gaylord Perry struggled to his fourth shutout of the season, giving up 11 hits, and Toby Harrah drove in the Rangers' first run with a sacrifice fly. Kurt Bevacque tripled in a run in the ninth.

Joe Lahoud singled in Tom Poquette from third and Doug Bird raised his record to 8-9 for Kansas City. Poquette had reached Dennis Eckersley, 8-9, for a two-out triple and one batter later Lahoud produced his first hit as a Royal.

Elsewhere in day action, Boston trounced Milwaukee 12-0 and Seattle downed Minnesota 5-2.

Mike Paxton pitched a fourhitter and Bernie Carbo and Denny Doyle each slammed homers and split six RBI to pull the Red Sox to within one game of Baltimore. Jim Rice extended his league-leading home run total to 27 and Butch Hobson crashed his 20th for Boston. Paxton, 4-2, struck out five and walked two.

Lee Stanton's two-run triple ignited a three-run first inning for the Mariners off loser Geoff Zahn. Gary Wheelock, 6-6, was the winner with relief help from Bill Laxton and John Montague, who had retired 33 straight batters before he walked Craig Kusick in the eighth. Montague now shares the American League record with Steve Busby.

Priscilla suffers loss

Oh boo-hoo. I finally had my first losing day at the State Fairgrounds' horse races.

I only lost $2 on Unique Bird in the ninth race. My other horse Going Getty, I guess, didn't want to het his little feet wet and stayed in the barn.

Aunt Priscilla loses $2

So that put my $116 spree fund at $131.40 which is still good.

I asked that darling John Rettele, who he liked and he told me to bet my $2 win tickets on Friday on Hustle Gal in the fourth and Prince of Kandy in the ninth.

Sunday Sonnet Tassel favorite

By Mark Gordon
Staff Sports Writer

Sunday Sonnet has been termed the best 2-year-old filly for much of this year's Nebraska horse race campaign.

She's won against "boys", she's won against "girls" and she's won two stakes races.

That's why she is the choice to gain Friday's Tassel Stakes at the State Fairgrounds against a select field of five foes in the 4½-furlong chase.

The Tassel Stakes is the first stakes race this season. It's for 2-year-old fillies.

Those conditions are ideal for Sunday Sonnet, the pride of Arnold E. Kraft.

The One More Chorus filly won the $11,400 second division of the Juvenile Stakes over 4 furlongs at Fonner Park in Grand Island on April 29.

After finishing behind Bold L.B., voted Ak-Sar-Ben's best 2-year-old, in two races, she won the $25,675 Ak-Sar-Ben Lassie Stakes, a 5½-furlong affair that attracted 13 2-year-old Nebraska-bred fillies.

In her last race, she finished a strong second to B.R. Evans' Petty Theft, a colt, in the $31,175 Ak-Sar-Ben Futurity over 6 furlongs on July 15 at the Omaha track.

Overall, Sunday Sonnet has three triumphs with one second in eight outings this season for earnings of $29,167.

Off that impressive record she will carry 122 pounds according to the allowance stakes conditions of the race. Her regular rider, Randy Meier, will again handle her.

The Kemling Brothers Inc's Gypsy Charm will carry 120 pounds, including Allan Hill, in quest of upsetting Sonday Sonnet.

Gypsy Charm won the $16,500 Expectation Stakes at Fonner Park over 4 furlongs by 4 lengths on April 21. She was fourth, beaten 5½-lengths by Sunday Sonnet in the Ak-Sar-Ben Lassie Stakes.

G. G. Wilkerson's Romy has captured three races — a maiden event at Fonner Park and then two claiming races at Ak-Sar-Ben.

Friday's sixth race attracted eight claimers in the $17,500-$15,000 range. That's the most expensive group of claiming horses ever to run at the State Fairgrounds.

In Thursday's races, David Cummings won both ends of the daily double.

Little Sac, the 5.50-1 second favorite, owned and trained by Cummings, won the first race over a fast track in 1:15 2-5 for the 6 furlongs.

Little Sac was held off the pacesetting I'm Sissy by jockey Jim Bazer, then rallied strongly to defeat favored Fan Tan Man by one length.

Then the rains came. A violent rainstorm with high winds hit the State Fairgrounds during the second race. But that didn't prevent Leslie Knosp's Mamie's Lark from registering a 10-length verdict over nine foes.

The Cummings-trained 3-year-old colt won easily in 1:42 2-5 under rider Wayne Anderson. He was the second-favorite and returned a $6.60 win for a $2 ticket.

It was the first time in the three-day old Lincoln meet, one trainer has won both halves of the daily double.

Anderson and Allan Hill were the only riders scoring two victories.

Besides Mamie's Lark, Anderson also won on R.M. Snell and D. F. Friend's Great Pumpkin at a $9 win payoff in the eighth race. It was Great Pumpkin's third win this year.

Bill won on Larry Seaman and Bob Kebre's Awiz ($6.20) in the fourth and on M. H. and Jerry Jones' Two Perks ($14.20) in the fifth.

The crowd of 5,030 wagered $408,459 on the nine races — an increase of $148,727 over the corresponding date of two years ago when 4,916 bet $259,732.

Bobick over LeDoux

Bloomington, Minn. (AP) — Duane Bobick bounced back from his only heavyweight loss Thursday night when he stopped Scott LeDoux in the eighth round of a scheduled 12-round fight.

Bobick, who lost his first fight May 11 when Ken Norton knocked him out in 58 seconds, carried the entire fight against LeDoux.

He was winning impressively when he put LeDoux down with a vicious combination of punches at 2:35 of the eighth round LeDoux stumbled to his feet to resume the fight, but was quickly sent down a second time and the fight was stopped

Bobick, 39-1, had won all the rounds but the second, which appeared even

It was Bobick's second victory over LeDoux in 15 months. The 221-pound fighter from Bowlus, Minn., won a unanimous decision over LeDoux in April 1976.

The second fight was a near carbon copy until the eighth, when Bobick's merciless punching finally took its toll.

The loss left LeDoux with a 20-5 pro record.

In preliminary action, Rick Folstad of St. Paul boosted his welterweight record to 17-0 with a fourth-round technical knockout over Bobby Rodriguez of Minneapolis, Jimmy Claar of New Lisbon, Ind., decisioned Clem Tucker of St Paul in a middleweight bout. Pete Holm of St. Paul scored a unanimous decision over Walt Burkhardt of Minneapolis in a heavyweight match and Doug Demmings of Minneapolis decisioned Cliff Wills of Hamilton, Ohio, in a six-round middleweight bout.

Legion tourney start delayed

Thursday evening's rain forced some juggling in the schedule for the Area 4 American Legion Baseball Tournament at Sherman Field.

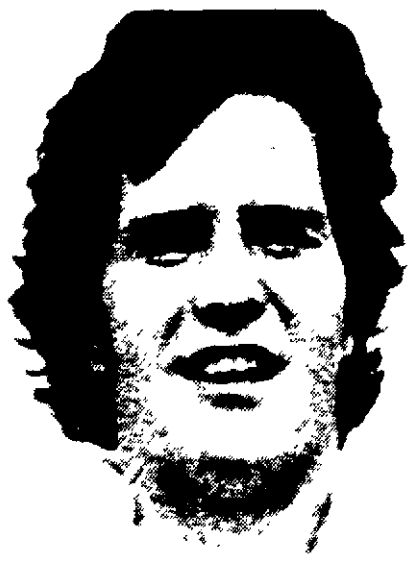
The First National Bank-Judds and Town & Country-Gerry's Junior games will be played at 5:30 and 8 p.m., respectively, Friday night.

The T. O. Haas-Leon's and Atlas-Beatrice Motor Freight Midget games which were scheduled for Friday night, have been moved to Saturday afternoon at 1 and 3 p.m.

The remainder of the tourney schedule will stay the same, barring further rain, with winners and losers of Friday's Junior games matched Saturday night.

Midget finals will be Sunday night and the Junior tourney will end Monday or Tuesday night.

South fullback sees future in baseball



Dave Goering

. . . Baseball in his future?

By Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

Dave Goering's only collegiate athletic goal is to play baseball at Nebraska. But until that happens, he's having fun in his one last fling at football.

Goering, a fullback from Holdrege, has impressed South Shrine Bowl coaches this week during training camp workouts at Doane College.

"I know he isn't all that well known, but we thought all along he'd be good because he looked great on film," South head coach Don Bailey said Thursday

Goering, 5-11 and 180, perhaps did not assume his rightful place in statewide prominence because he blocks more than he runs.

"I love to lead through and block," he said "I'd much rather knock two people down for another back to score than score a touchdown myself There's more work involved and it's a better feeling "

Last year, Goering carried the ball less than 100 times for Holdrege for 400-plus rushing yards He also caught 16 passes for 200 more yards.

Those statistics aren't the kind to catch a sportswriter's eye. Fortunately, coaches look at more important things

Goering reported to the South camp in excellent physical condition This summer, he hit 330 and swatted five homeruns for Holdrege's Junior Legion baseball team Last summer, he hit 510 and eight homers

"I started gearing for the Shrine Bowl about a month ago," he said "This is a real thrill to come down here I knew I'd have to hit as hard as I could to give the coaches a better look at me That was my main goal."

Although his early training camp performance might prompt Goering to revamp his thinking about trying Nebraska football as a walkon, he wasn't expecting to change his mind

"They've got a hundred walkons already," he observed "I don't want to end up quitting something I thought I could stick out baseball

He'll try to impress the Cornhusker baseball staff as a third baseman — after he's done his last bit of blocking in the Shrine Bowl Aug. 6 in Lincoln

Lincoln Open to have new look

By Dave Sittler
Staff Sports Writer

If a label were to be attached to this year's Lincoln Adult Open Tennis Tournament, an appropriate and accurate title would be — new.

The annual event schedule this Friday through Sunday in the Capital City has a fresh approach that includes a new class, new site, new tournament director and at least one new champion is assured in the open singles division.

In the past, the tournamentwhich is sanctioned by the United States and Missouri Valley Tennis Associations and is sponsored by the Lincoln Tennis Association, has been held at the Woods Tennis Courts.

But due to lower rental rates and flexibility, the tournament has been switched to the Lincoln Racquet Club.

Because of the large field, which includes more than 300 entries, courts at the University of Nebraska will also be used the first two days of the meet.

In her first year as the tournament director, Pat Merkle likes the options the six indoor and three outdoor courts at the Racquet Club offer.

"If the weather turns rotten we can always move all the matches to the indoor courts," Merkle said. "We may have to play all night, but we will play."

The new class is the A division which was created this year to include players who are not ranked or who have not won a tournament or advanced to the quarterfinals of an event in the last year.

The A division will hold only singles matches this year, according to Merkle.

Men's singles action in the open class will initiate play Friday at 5 p.m., where defending champion Sig Garnett will be gunning for his third consecutive crown.

Defending women's open singles titlist Joyce McVicker has elected not to return to seek another championship.

Top seeds in the event are a pair of Omaha netters. Two-time defending high school champion Bob Green is men's top seed with Isabel Whitney drawing the women's No. 1 spot.

Green, who will be a senior at Creighton Prep this fall, won the Lincoln Junior Open title two weeks ago. Bill Roach is the No. 2 men's seed, while former Omaha Burke and University of Nebraska women's ace, Kathy Hawkins is the No. 2 women's seed.

Tournament director Merkle indicated all players are requested to report to the Racquet Club Friday at 5 p.m. to check in and to receive tournament instructions.

Yastrzemski out of lineup

Boston (AP) — Veteran slugger Carl Yastrzemski was left behind to give an injured foot complete rest Thursday night when the Boston Red Sox took off for California and the start of a nine-game trip.

Yastrzemski, who will be 38 on Aug. 22, was withdrawn from the scheduled lineup Thursday after he had his foot examined by Dr. Thomas Tierney, the Red Sox' team physician.

Yastrzemski, batting .300 with 19 homers and 66 runs batted in while playing his 17th season with the Red Sox, suffered a severely bruised right foot when hit by his own batted ball just before the All-Star game. He tried to continue playing, but finally sought out Tierney for further medical advice.

The Red Sox also got positive news on another medical front. Relief ace Bill Campbell, injured when he ran into the wall shagging flies in pre-game practice on Sunday, has painful ribs, but X-rays showed no fracture. Campbell left as scheduled with the team.

'Super' mud keeps pitchers pleased

Associated Press

Pssst. There's a dirty business operating in Willingboro, N.J.

Major league baseball has been knee deep in it for more than 30 years.

Every commissioner from Kenesaw Mountain Landis to Bowie Kuhn has pumped funds into this filthy outfit.

It involves . . . mud. Not just any old mud. This is a special kind, supposedly found only in Willingboro.

Umpires rub the dirt on five dozen baseballs before each major league game to help pitchers get a better grip on the ball.

"They've been using it since before I got here and that was in the 1950s," said Fred Fleig, National League secretary-treasurer in charge of the umpires.

"Before they would just go out to a nearby river, say the Ohio, for the mud," said Fleig.

"Then a fella by the name of Lena Blackburne a former Cincinnati Reds infielder and Chicago White Sox manager said he had a new type of mud that worked well on the ball. Well, the National League liked it and had him send two coffee cans of it to every ballpark."

Blackburne became ill in 1968. The future of his business was in jeopardy since no one knew where or how his mud was processed. So he came clean about baseball's dirtiest secret to John Haas, a lifelong friend.

Blackburne would have been proud of his old crony. Haas has kept the mud business virtually a clandestine operation ever since.

At 84, Haas finds the trips to the lake for the mud increasingly tougher. So he's taken into his confidence his daughter, Mrs. Betty Bintliff, and her family in Willingboro.

Mrs. Bintliff said the mud is gathered each fall before the first freeze by her husband and five sons from a tributary on their property. It's brought back to a garage for a winter-long process.

Eventually, the mud is packed in coffee cans and marked "Lena Blackburne Rubbing Mud."

The American League, American Association and International League as well as the NL specify annual delivery dates and spring training sites.

"I heard we get $100 a can," said Mrs. Bintliff. "I wish we did. Actually, it's around $15 a can and that varies, depending on postage rates."

Mrs. Bintliff envisons the Blackburne's dirt process as a possible family tradition. "I think we'll be doing it as long as the baseball leagues request it. The time will come when our grandsons will take it if they want it.

"We've had people stop by wanting to see the mud. But we have to be careful. Some people are trying to copy it. Really, it must be very special to them.

"We don't divulge too much of what we do to anyone," she added. "If my husband knew I was saying this much, he'd tell me to shut up."

That's because their dirt has become part of the game's tradition. A can of Lena Blackburne Rubbing Mud sits on a shelf in baseball's Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y.

Bet service operator Stahnke found guilty

Grant Stahnke, Lincoln, Wednesday was found guilty and fined a total of $400 on charges that he operated an illegal messenger betting service for horse race fans.

Stahnke, who intends to appeal his conviction by municipal judge Janis Gradwohl, said the 1929 city ordinance under which he was convicted is unnecessary and unconstitutional.

Following his conviction, Stahnke said four messenger betting service operators have shops in Omaha. "and I presume all four are running bets to Lincoln in violation of the same ordinance."

Part of the frustration, he said, "is that it (betting messenger service) can be done throughout the state, except in Lincoln because of a 1929 city ordinance."

The business allows race fans to place a bet with a messenger service operator until two hours before post time. The bets are then placed at the track, with the operator taking a 10 per cent service charge for each bet made.

Stahnke was arrested and charged with two counts of taking bets and transmitting bets to the horse races at Fonner Park in Grand Island.

A messenger service in downtown Omaha Wednesday said it was carrying bets to the Nebraska Fairgrounds where the Lincoln racing season opened Tuesday.

Lincoln police chief George Hansen Wednesday indicated he had no power to stop the Omaha service. He said the bets are taken in Omaha, not Lincoln, and the bets are placed on state property at the Fairgrounds, "over which I have no control."

There is no state law or Omaha ordinance that prohibits messenger betting services.

Stahnke said he is disappointed and frustrated by Wednesday's conviction. "I'm filled with disbelief, and those reactions very quickly result in anger and frustration."

Lincoln driver ranks eighth

Hallett, Okla. — Lincoln's Duane Eitel will try to improve his eighth place national standing in the Scirocco-Bilstin National auto series here this weekend.

The Oklahoma race marks the sixth race of the 10 race program. Following this race, the championship moves to Lexington, Ohio for two weeks then to Minnesota and Canada.

Eitel has gained the nation's No. 8 spot driving his McDonald-Scirocco racer in the series that started in Laguna Beach, Calif.

Westside grad signs with UNO

Omaha (AP) — Steve Crouse, an Omaha Westside High School graduate, has signed a national letter of intent to attend the University of Nebraska-Omaha, baseball coach Bob Gates announced.

Crouse played both first and third base at Westside and was named to the All-Metro team as a first baseman during his senior year.

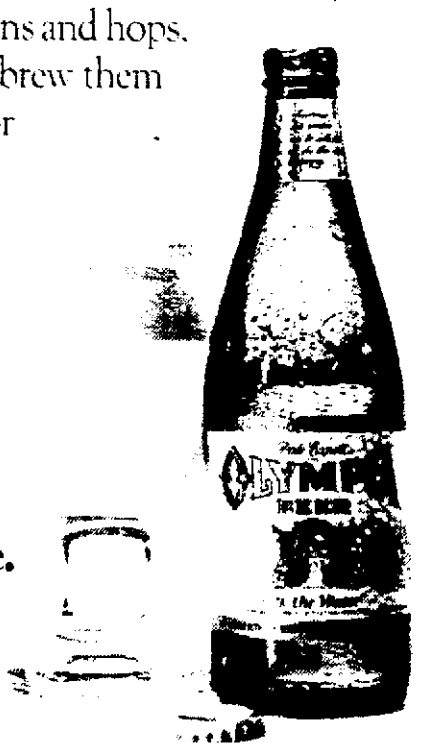
(Girard Clark, barley farmer.)

"I like to think it tastes so good because of our barley... 'round here, we call it Clark's Beer."

"The weather may change... and our farm equipment may change... but we get the same good crop of malting barley, year after year. Right now the kernels are nice and plump... the kind it takes to make good tasting Oly."

That's right, Girard. It takes good barley like yours to make Olympia Beer. And your neighbors contribute many other fine ingredients, too. Like grains and hops, rich with flavor and aroma. And we brew them with naturally pure artesian water for a taste that's distinctively Oly. It's the way we've brewed great beer since 1896.

"Like I say, it takes our good barley to make good beer... and Olympia's good beer."



A great beer doesn't change.
Olympia never will.

Carter plans to fund welfare by oil tax

Washington (AP) — President Carter, who said Thursday he is trying to hold down the cost of his welfare reform plan, is working with a proposal that would use some revenues from Social Security tax and a tax on crude oil to help finance a $28.9-billion welfare system.

The Associated Press gained access to the financing section of the 60-page welfare reform outline prepared by HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr.

Some controversy was likely over his inclusion of $300 million in Social Security money and $1.3 billion from Carter's proposed well-head tax in the sum of money available for welfare reform.

During the afternoon, Carter and several Cabinet members worked on the draft proposal, but their decisions, if any, were not disclosed. In the morning, the President had told a nationally broadcast news conference, "I am trying to hold down the cost of the over-all program."

He reminded his audience of "the careful wording of my goals. It said the initial cost would not exceed present expenditure."

The size of present expenditures on welfare depends on which programs one defines as welfare. Califano's document essentially includes the cost of many existing programs not viewed as welfare by the general public, thus allowing a higher initial cost for the new program.

The effort to keep federal outlays from rising as a result of the program which Carter hopes to make public by Aug. 4 has caused Califano to scour the government for programs that can be eliminated or reduced so their funds can be used to finance the new welfare system.

Advocates of these programs have protested some of the initial proposals vehemently, particularly efforts to divert money from housing programs.

It has already been disclosed that the new program will cover more persons than the old one, that it will require many to work, emphasizing private over public jobs, and that the more a recipient works, the more money he could keep even while having his welfare payments reduced.

Califano suggested last week that a family of four with no one required to work might get a federal payment of $3,800 a year plus extra money in those states or cities which wish to supplement that.

In the outline that Califano gave Carter, the HEW secretary estimated the new welfare system might cost $28.9 billion.

The document said that $25.8 billion of this could be raised by eliminating these existing programs: Aid to Families with Dependent Children, Supplemental Security Income for the aged, blind and disabled, food stamps, unemployment compensation after the 26th week, the earned income tax credit, a $5.5-billion public service jobs program and the Work Incentive program for current welfare recipients.

Big city mayors have already protested using the public service jobs money, with which more than 700,000 persons can be employed by state and local government. The administration argues that this program is in effect only when unemployment is over 6 per cent and its predictions show unemployment dropping to 5.6 per cent, which would eliminate the program anyway.

At this point, the document notes that $3.1 billion more needs to be obtained to fund Califano's suggested system and outlines some options for doing so.

"We believe that the following two additional offsets are appropriate and should be included in the sum of money available for welfare reform," the document says.

—"Increases in Social Security contributions as a result of increased earnings on the part of participants in the jobs component of the proposal.

—"Decreases in unemployment insurance outlays resulting from reduced unemployment following implementation of the jobs program."

The first option was said to be worth $300 million and the second $400 million. It was not clear how the Social Security money would be handled, particularly whether there was some accounting procedure which would enable the $300 million to go into Social Security trust funds and still be counted toward financing welfare.

There has been considerable concern that the Social Security trust fund will be short of money to pay benefits it owes in future years.

If these two options were approved, $2.4 billion would still be needed to finance the welfare reform plan and the document lists options for raising this money.

It says $1.3 billion could be obtained from Carter's proposed well-head tax on crude oil, which is designed to bring the price of domestic oil up to the world price.

House committees have already approved using most of the $10 billion the tax would raise for rebates to all adult Americans including current welfare recipients. The oil industry argues the money should be used to finance greater exploration for oil.

Califano also wrote that $400 million could be made available by preventing, detecting and penalizing fraud in HEW programs.

Another $550 million could be obtained, the document says, by reducing Housing and Urban Development Department housing subsidies by this amount. The theory is that those welfare recipients who live in subsidized housing would end up paying this amount in additional rents as their incomes rose under the new system. HUD officials have said they are not sure this figure is accurate.

Rural-city House coalition finishes up on farm bill

Washington (UPI) — Despite a veto threat, a farm-city House coalition passed an omnibus farm-food bill Thursday, including a new free food stamp system for the needy and increased supports for hard-pressed grain farmers.

The bill, which farm leaders plan to begin compromising with a more costly Senate version next week, passed on a 294-114 roll call vote. House members earlier rejected an administration bid to remove a section setting up a price support program for sugar.

Rep. Raymond Lederer, D-Pa., told the House, "It is extremely doubtful that the President will sign the bill" if the sugar section remains in a final Senate-House version.

By a 246-165 vote, the House reaffirmed its backing for the sugar support which would prop raw sugar prices — currently under 11 cents a pound — at 14 cents a pound.

Critics of the sugar plan charged it would add $1 billion to consumer food bills. Backers said, however, it would be far better than a proposed administration plan of direct payments to sugar growers. They charged that killing the support plan would hand the Coca-Cola Co. — a heavy sugar user — $100 million dollars.

Earlier, the House voted 320-91 approval of the bill's food stamp section including President Carter's plan to let needy people get free food stamps without first buying some stamps for cash. The bill also includes a substantial boost in income guarantees for 1977 grain crops and further hikes for major crops from 1978 through 1981.

Members struck from the bill by a 300-109 vote a program under which bakers could have set up a checkoff program to finance wheat research. Critics, including farm and consumer groups, said it would add costs for both groups.

The House approved a section under which the government would pay half the cost of federal supervision of private and state grain inspection agencies. At present, those agencies are required to pay the full supervision cost through fees.

In final action on food stamps, the House endorsed a section providing for a test in at least one area of every state of a "workfare" plan under which some needy people could be forced to work out the value of their free stamps on public service jobs.

It also adopted an amendment allowing individual states to convert stamp benefits to cash for the elderly, blind and disabled.

Administration experts estimated the total cost of the House measure at $10.5 billion to $11.5 billion annually, depending on how weather affects crop support costs.

This total, which includes costs for food stamps, farm supports, agricultural research and overseas food aid, is roughly $1 billion more than the administration wanted to spend, but it is about $1.5 billion below the cost of a Senate bill which President Carter has threatened to veto.

House Agriculture Committee Chairman Thomas Foley, D-Wash., planned to begin a Senate-House conference Friday to compromise the House measure with a bill passed earlier by the Senate.

"We have forged a real, working urban-rural coalition," Rep. Fred Richmond, D-N.Y., head of a subcommittee which drafted the stamp section, told reporters.

"If the food stamps were not in the farm bill, we wouldn't have a farm or a food stamp bill," Richmond said.

Key farm sections of the bill include provisions pushing the 1977 wheat support target price to $2.90 a bushel instead of the $2.65 originally proposed by House farm leaders and endorsed by Carter who earlier had wanted to hold it at $2.47.

The 1977 corn support loan and support target were both raised to $2 a bushel, replacing previous house proposals for a $1.75 loan and a $1.85 target.

The 1977 wheat action will provide an estimated $475 million in additional government payments to wheat growers. The corn action, while it would not result in government payments, could raise the potential value of the corn crop by up to $1.3 billion.

Nebraska's congressional delegation, Reps. John Cavanaugh, Virginia Smith and Charles Thone, all voted in favor of the farm bill Thursday night.

Robbery suggested as likely motive in 6 Miami killings

Miami (AP) — In a middle-class neighborhood seldom troubled by crime, six people were methodically shot to death and two others wounded after one of the killers gained entry by posing as a power company employe.

Police suggested robbery as the mostly likely motive but said they knew little about the killers. "We're not even sure how many subjects we're looking for," spokesman Suzanne Tindall said Thursday of the late Wednesday slayings.

One of the survivors, Margaret Wooden, 25, was able to give detectives some information from her hospital bed.

Police quoted her as saying she had been alone in the home of Livingston Stocker when a man came to the door saying he was a repairman for Florida Power & Light Co.

She said the man entered the house and tied her up, then let an unknown number of other persons in, police said.

As Stocker and a number of his friends arrived at the home they were captured, bound and shot. Five bodies were found in one bedroom, a sixth in another. All were tied with neckties and handkerchiefs.

The other survivor, Johnnie Hall, 45, was found wounded and dazed in the front room. He was hospitalized in serious condition.

As the bodies were taken away early Thursday, screams and sobs pierced the night.

"He's dead, he's dead," an unidentified woman cried as a body was carried from the three-bedroom, concrete block house in a suburb northwest of Miami.

"Help me. I want to die now," another wept as a fifth body was brought out.

It was unclear whether the victims arrived singly or in a group. A police spokesman had said earlier they were believed to be gathering to rehearse their rock band.

Stocker's rented 1977 Thunderbird, apparently taken by the killers, was found a few miles away Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Tindall identified four of the dead as Stocker, 33; John Holmes, 26; Henry Clayton, 35; and Michael Miller, 24, a nephew of Stocker. All were from Miami.

The name of a fifth victim was not released. Police said the sixth had not been identified.

Margaret Wooden fled to a neighbor's house after the men left, her ear bleeding where a bullet grazed it and her hands still bound with a necktie.

"She was trembling all over," said the neighbor, Julius Davis.

Davis told his wife, "There are lots of people shot next door," and she called police, who later said an anonymous caller reported the killings about the same time.

Davis said Stocker worked for Sears Roebuck and Co. and "ran a quiet house."

Officer Lonnie Lawrence, who has lived and worked in the area, said it was a quiet neighborhood, "a middle-class area, a low-crime area, with no real problems I can remember."

Davis said he could recall only one break-in in recent months.

Abolish guillotine, says commission

Paris (AP) — A presidential commission of inquiry into rising violence in France has recommended abolition of the death penalty and its replacement by long fixed prison terms, Justice Minister Alain Peyrefitte said Thursday.

Peyrefitte told a news conference the commission found the death penalty, which is by guillotine in France, "inoperative and repugnant."

He was appointed to head the commission 18 months ago when he was out of office. The commission turned over a 700-page report Wednesday to President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

The fixed terms would be applied in four specific cases, the commission suggested, the death of a child in a kidnap, the murder of any person directly or indirectly involved in the operation of a public service, the murder of a person chosen as a victim because of his or her physical weakness, and a second or subsequent crime of murder or physical injury.

The death penalty has been the object of broad discussion in France in recent years but has never been debated by parliament. The last execution, earlier this year, was of a man who killed an 8-year-old girl. In practice over the last 15 years, the death penalty has only been carried out in cases of the murder of children or prison officials.

Peyrefitte said he and the 10-man commission, including criminologists, sociologists, lawyers, philosophers and architects, had been particularly struck by the connection between rising crime and urbanization.

Their basic guideline had been widespread reports of the increasing sense of insecurity of the French people over recent years, he said. He had commented earlier in the day that fixed prison terms would meet this sense of insecurity by convincing the public that criminals would not be released early on parole to strike again.

The rise in crime since 1970-71, he said, had been particularly due to an "anarchic" development of urban zones, taking no account of the natural environment, and by the postwar development of housing projects of an "inhuman" size.

The archetypal criminal, he said, is a rootless boy aged 16 to 25, in a town of more than 200,000 inhabitants and living in a high-rise building over six stories in a new development. He comes from a disturbed family and had a poor school record, suffering particularly from the obligatory rise in the school-leaving age from 14 to 16.

The report criticizes the educational system for not having developed programs to interest children during these last two years.

Attorney general denies request to move Ray

Nashville, Tenn. (UPI) — Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell Thursday denied Tennessee Gov. Ray Blanton's request to transfer James Earl Ray, convicted assassin of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., to a federal penitentiary.

Blanton was notified of the decision shortly before Bell made the announcement at a news conference in Washington.

"We are extremely disappointed that the federal government has decided not to accept the responsibility for the confinement of James Earl Ray," Blanton said. "I am confident we can handle him, but I would point out again that Ray is a nationally known figure, that he is the subject of numerous investigations, and that he has a record of attempted escapes.

"If we are to have the responsibility for his incarceration, the federal courts should allow us the latitude to take whatever precautions are necessary to secure his safety, prevent future escape attempts, and keep to a minimum the disruption of the daily routine at the prison."

Blanton requested the transfer following the escape of Ray and six other convicts from Brushy Mountain State Prison in east Tennessee June 10.

All of the prisoners were captured during a massive, five-day manhunt and all pleaded innocent to escape charges at a hearing Wednesday.

Settlements on Jordan raise protest

United Nations, N.Y. (AP) — The 20 Arab delegations at the United Nations agreed Thursday to protest Israel's legalization this week of three Jewish settlements in the West Bank of the Jordan River.

Ambassador Amin Hilmy II, the Arab League's U.N. observer, said they would make the protest Friday in letters to Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim and the Security Council.

The delegates, convened by request of U.N. observer Zehdi Labib Terzi of the Palestine Liberation Organization, also decided Hilmy should hold a news conference here after submission of the letters.

There was discussion of a possible Security Council meeting on the issue, Hilmy told a reporter, but no decision to ask for one because a delegate needs instructions from his government to do that.
